SOVIET DEFECTOR CHANGES HIS MIND

OTTAWA (CP) — Sergei Nemtsanov, the Soviet diver who defected during the Olympic Games, has told immigration department officials he intends to return home, a department spokesman said today.

Nemtsanov, 17, left a Montreal meeting this afternoon in the company of Soviet consular officials, an immigration department spokesman said.

The immigration officer who met Nemtsanov Monday was the same official who attended a meeting July 31 between the diver and Soviet embassy staff.

The department spokesman said the officer told Nemtsanov the next step is up to him and "we're waiting to hear from him again."

If Nemtsanov decides to return to the Soviet Union, it would be up to him how he went, the spokesman said. He has been granted a minister's permit that expires at the end of January. After that he could apply for refuge or landed immigrant status. Both steps would require cabinet approval.

An immigration official said Nemtsanov had spent some time since his defection July 29 on a vacation in Ontario with a Canadian friend.

Nemtsanov's departure from the Soviet team during the Olympic summer games sparked angry charges by the Soviet Union the youth had been "kidnapped" and "brainwashed."

For a time, the Soviets threatened to cut sports links with Canada, raising the possibility that a scheduled hockey series between the two countries would be called off. The Soviets later withdrew the threat.

Consumers Owe $20B

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian consumers owed $20.26 billion at the end of June, a 17.3 per cent increase in consumer credit over the total a year earlier, Statistics Canada reported Monday.

Personal loans from chartered banks accounted for $14.84 billion of this total, a 23.7 per cent increase from a year earlier.

Among the other larger lenders were life insurance companies with policy loans of $1.19 billion, up seven per cent, and department stores and furniture, television and radio and appliance stores that had outstanding credit of $1.27 billion, a six per cent increase from a year earlier.

Toll 1,800, Rising In Filipino Quake

Times News Services

A killer earthquake struck the southern Philippines today, toppling concrete buildings, spawning a 15-foot tidal wave and killing 1,800 persons — many swept away from coastal homes.

The death toll was rising steadily as reports came in from stricken areas.

The centre of the earthquake, which struck just after midnight, was under the Celebes Sea. But it was the resulting tidal wave, sweeping over the scattered islands in the area and washing away homes as people slept, that apparently caused most of the deaths.

President Ferdinand Marcos declared a state of emergency over densely-populated Mindanao Island, the worst-hit area, and the nearby islands of Sulu, Basilan and Tawi Tawi, all swamped by the wave. Dozens of buildings, including schools, collapsed on Mindanao, officials here said.

The quake, which registered 7.8 on the open-ended Richter Scale, was felt in Manila, more than 500 miles away, but it caused no damage there. It was felt all over the southern islands and on parts of southern Luzon, the northern island.

Marcos said 19 persons were buried alive by falling buildings in Cotabato, a city of 100,000.

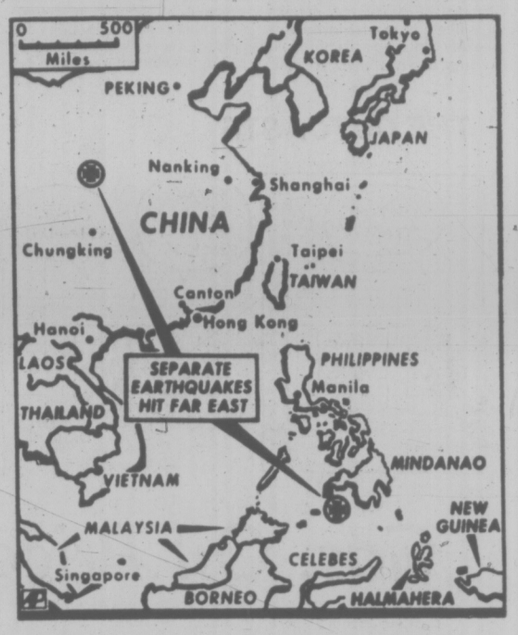
A span on the Quirino bridge, linking Cotabato with Davao, on the opposite side of the island, collapsed as did two multi-storey hotels and a department store.

The Philippine quake came on the heels of a major earthquake that rocked western China Monday night. That tremor was reported centred on a city of 50,000 people and might have been much more serious than originally believed.

Chinese officials told an Australian diplomat the epicentre of the shock, China's second big quake in three weeks, was Mienyang — a big trading and silk-manufacturing centre on the main railway line from Chengtu to northern China.

Foreign monitoring stations had earlier put the epicentre about 100 miles further north in a sparsely-populated mountain region near the borders of Szcechwan province and Kansu.

Northeast China was hit by a quake July 28 that measured 8.2, the strongest in the world in 12 years.



Volcanic Bang Just the Start?

Times News Services

POINTE-A-PITRE, Guadeloupe — Scientists say they can't predict whether the spectacular eruption of the La Soufriere volcano which had been expected for days is still in the offing after a minor eruption of the volcano Monday night spared neighboring villages and caused no major damage.

The scientists, who have been predicting that an erruption of catastrophic force is imminent, made a helicopter flight over the danger zone today. Later, they said it was impossible to forecast whether there might be more volcanic activity.

Heavy clouds and bad general weather conditions stopped the team of experts from flying directly over the crater of the volcano on this French Caribbean island.

Dr. Robert Brousse of the University of Paris, who was in the helicopter, said:

"There was no damage in the neighboring communities. We overflew the villages and they're all intact. The rivers aren't flowing with mud. But there is a very dense cloud of ash that stopped us from flying over the town of Baillif."

Baillif was one of the communities evacuated during the weekend as the volcano in the 4,813-foot peak gave signs it would soon go up. In all, about 72,000 people were moved out of the danger zone — more than 20 per cent of Guadeloupe's population. Police estimate there are about 50 people who refused to leave their homes.

The erruption came at 7:45 p.m. local time Monday and the earth quivered as far as 20 miles away. A scientific team near the volcano was removed to a ship offshore, but returned to the island this morning to start its investigation.

The blast Monday night was heard 10 miles from the volcano.

After the eruption, Brousse said: "The circumstances showed that we were right in our predictions."

He said the tremors emananating from the volcano would not have sufficient strength to topple buildings outside the danger zone.

LABOR SHARE UP 17%

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor's share of national income rose by 17 per cent during the 12 months ended in May to $8.81 billion, Statistics Canada reported Monday.

Included in the latest figures are large lump-sum payments made during May in anticipation of final contract settlements, which pushes up the percentage increase on a year-over-year basis.

The consumer price index, the most commonly used measure of inflation, rose by 8.9 per cent in the same 12-month period.

Gas Prices Rising

The wholesale prices of gasoline and home heating oil will rise in September and the only question is how much.

Spokesmen for the oil industry in B.C. said today the increases will likely be in the range of 3.5 cents a gallon for heating oil and about four cents a gallon for gasoline, but that in either case it would depend on approval by the B.C. Energy Commission.

The increases are necessary, they said, to offset the rise in price of crude oil which went up three cents a gallon to $9.05 a 35-gallon barrel on July 1.

The price increase approved by the Anti-Inflation Board was not passed on then because, by federal-provincial agreement, a freeze was instituted to give the major oil companies time to make inventory adjustments. The freeze ends Aug. 30.

Federal Energy Minister Allister Gillespie has recommeded a 3.5 cent a gallon increase, allowing 3.2 cents to reflect the increased wellhead price, 0.1 cent for the increased cost of capital, and 0.2 cents for higher gathering

Supplies are running out as Safeway prepares for shutdown

Empty Shelves In Safeways

A shipping shutdown is already taking effect at Safeway's 10 Greater Victoria stores and shoppers for some items are being met with bare shelves.

Items like cheese and ice-cream are selling for half-price and today's early shoppers took full advantage of the mark-downs.

Cashiers were issuing tips on food freezing as customers baskets loaded with the sale items, passed through the check-out counters.

Several counters — fresh produce and luncheon meats especially — were already bare.

Customers are met with a sign apologizing for the lack of some foodstuffs "due to warehouse problems" and area manager Jack Fidler said today he expects supplies will last at least until the end of the week.

Meanwhile, other food stores are reporting an increase in sales.

There have been no moves toward settlement of the contract dispute that led to the lockout of 800 warehouse and supply firm employees here in Victoria and Burnaby and Dawson Creek last Friday.

Al Peterson, negotiator for the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union, said there are 51 contract issues remaining unresolved.

Another Socred Hired

Dianne Hartwick, the defeated candidate for the presidency of the Social Credit Party, has been appointed executive assistant to Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy at $19,500 a year.

Hartwick was defeated in her bid for the presidency at the convention last October by Peter Hyndman, who replaced McCarthy in the job. She was regarded as McCarthy's hand-picked successor to the presidency.

McCarthy said Hartwick will have "special duties in special services co-ordination with the department of human resources."

"Her initial assignment with the department of human resources will be a review of pre-school services and other school board services for handicapped children," McCarthy said. "This function will require intensive work with associations concerned with the blind, deaf, cerebral palsy, multiple sclerosis and other handicapped conditions."

McCarthy last month appointed her former campaign manager John Plul to the newly-created $27,000-a-year job as convention promoter for the province.

She also appointed Dick Lillico, a Socred worker, to a $22,200-a-year job as director of information services in B.C. House, London, England.

Ford Close to Nomination As Reagan Backers Waver

Washington Post

KANSAS CITY — Amid growing tension and clear signs that President Ford was closing in on the presidential nomination, the Republican National Convention opened Monday night.

While both sides manoeuvred in anticipation of a key procedural vote tonight, the president picked up more delegates, and others appeared to be wavering in their support for challenger Ronald Reagan.

At the end of the day the Washington Post delegate count gave Ford 1,126 delegates, (UPI reported Ford had gained 1,130 delegates. AP said he was three short.) Reagan had 1,034 delegates, while only 99 delegates remained uncommitted.

Only in their repeated denunciations of Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter, who holds commanding leads in the polls over both Ford and Reagan, did the Republicans who jammed the flag-bedecked Kemper Arena seem united.

On a day when the rivalry of the two camps produced repeated shouts of "We Want Reagan" and "We Want Ford" on the convention floor and spontaneous demonstrations for the wives of the two candidates, there were these other developments:

— Former Illinois Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie, chairman of his delegation and a Ford supporter, claimed that two members of his delegation had been offered bribes by Reagan supporters. He produced no evidence of his charge.

The allegation provoked Reagan into a denunciation of Ogilvie. The former California governor expressed "surprise and disgust" at the "falsehood" and suggested that the Ford campaign was practising dirty tricks.

—New York Senator James L. Buckley withdrew his presidential candidacy before it really began, leaving the convention as a clear two-man test between Ford and Reagan.

—Despite Ford's steady gain in delegate strength, a key Ford strategist said that the test today on a vital procedural vote was "wide open and could go either way."

He was referring to a proposal rejected by the convention rules committee Sunday that would make a major test of a Reagan-sponsored plan to force Ford to select his running mate before the presidential nominating ballot. There were signs that this vote would cross candidate

Sewer Robbers Hit Again

Times News Services

PARIS — A gang tunnelled up through sewers and into a bank to empty 200 safe-deposit boxes in what appeared to be a repeat of a spectacular bank robbery in Nice last month, police said today.

The thieves, working during the weekend, drilled through an underground concrete wall to reach the vaults of the Societe Generale branch located on the exclusive Ile Saint-Louis, home of many French film stars and politicians.

No official figure was given on the value of the haul but a police spokesman said it is possible the amount may exceed the $12 million taken by the gang that robbed the Societe Generale in Nice.

The robbery was discovered when the bank reopened after a three-day holiday weekend.

Police said the thieves had installed their own ventilation system in the tunnel to ensure that they were not asphyxiated by the fumes of their drilling equipment.

The robbery took place at the height of the vacation season when many of the bank's wealthy clients use their safe-deposit boxes for their valuables.

The Nice robbers, who were reported to have used getaway motorboats, dug a 25-foot tunnel, shored up coalmine-style from a sewer into the underground vault of the Societe Generale branch bank. They welded the vault door shut from the inside to delay investigation and used acetylene torches to open eight safes in the vault and rifle 200 safe deposit boxes.

U.S. Tuna Boats Sent Packing, Canadian Irate

A Nanaimo salmon fisherman is indignant over the "high-handed treatment" given American fishermen Monday in Winter Harbor on the west coast of Vancouver Island by the fisheries patrol vessel Tanu.

Ken Campbell, owner of the 44-foot troller The Chariot, radioed from Winter Harbor, 40 miles south of Cape Scott, complaining that the Tanu had forced 10 to 12 "American Tuna boats that had come into Winter Harbor for shelter and fuel to go outside the 12 miles fishing limit in winds that were blowing 30 miles an hour.

He said the boats were evicted about 5 p.m.

"We've always been very well treated when we go into Washington ports. This is kind of high-handed treatment for neighboring boats," Campbell said.

But Capt. Mitch Gay of Vancouver, head of the fisheries' marine division, said today the Tanu was only doing her job and had actually been lenient with the American fishermen.

Gay said, under Canada's Coastal Fisheries Protection Act, no foreign fishing vessel is allowed into a Canadian port except in case of emergencies or foul weather.

"The master of the Tanu is a fine master mariner. Seamen are always sympathetic to other seamen," Gay said, "He would never have forced them out if the weather was that bad. Tuna trollers are good seaworthy boats."

When told of Campbell's claim that Canadian fishermen are welcomed in American ports, Gay said American authorities would seize Canadian boats that enter their ports, except in emergency situations.

"He (Campbell) couldn't have been fishing at the time," Gay said.

He said the fuel barge had not been in Winter Harbor on Monday and that the Tanu had been kind enough to allow three of the American boats back into the harbor today to refuel, even though it is against the law.

By January, 1977, Gay said Canada's 200-mile limit will probably be in effect and, unless American fishermen are licenced, they will have to keep outside the new limits.

"He (Campbell) probably had a friend among the Americans," Gay said, "But most fishermen wouldn't agree with him. They're out catching fish that Canadians should be getting."

Trade Deficit Persisting

Times News Services

OTTAWA — A stark warning about Canadian balance-of-payments problems was issued Monday in a special report of the Conference Board in Canada.

The board urged as "highly desirable" further discussion and debate on future commercial policy options because Canadian living standards are at stake.

The independent, non-profit, Conference Board stated that since 1970 Canada's balance-of-payment has moved into a new phase.

The sharp increase in the balance-of-payments deficit since 1973 may partly, but not wholly, be explained by cyclical factors, the report states.

It adds that relatively large balance-of-payments deficits are likely to persist in the forseeable future assuming no change in government policy.

It says Canada has clearly moved towards increased specialization in exports of non-agricultural raw materials over the past several years.

Canada's cost performance in secondary industries relative to the United States had been much poorer since 1970 than it was during the 1960s.

"The outlook is for a substantial and increasing overall trade deficit in energy beginning in 1977 and continuing into the 1980s," it says.

At the same time, government policy decisions that discourage development of resource industries, by such measures as holding down gas exports, reinforce the pessimistic view of Canada's international trade prospects, the study says.

Because of the lack of progress in the current round of multilateral trade talks in Geneva there is little chance of any significant reduction in trade barriers and world economic growth likely will be slower in the future. This means the overall outlook for Canada's export growth is poor.

The study says the government has two choices. It can either try to reduce the size of the current account deficit or learn to live with it and finance it by borrowing abroad.

Within the manufacturing sector, the report says, Canada's comparative advantage appears to lie in low technology, relatively capital intensive industries, in industries with a large domestic natural resource content, and in industries not characterized by economics of scale.

There are likely to be additional structural problems in the balance-of-payments in the future which may worsen the current situation, the report adds.

The report notes that the rate of deterioration in Canada's current account balance over the last two years has been unprecedented: for the year 1975 it was in the range of $5.1 billion, an all time record.

It says Canada's performance in terms of unit labor costs has clearly been inferior to that of the United States in the last two years, although the Canadian economy has performed relatively better in this regard than those of several other industrial countries.

Relative deterioration in cost competitiveness dates back to the 1960s, but effects of this trend have been felt gradually.

"The medium term outlook for the growth of Canada's international trade and for the balance of payments is not encouraging," the report says.

Gas, Oil Prices Rise Again

costs experienced by Alberta crude oil producers.

The federal government has also indicated it will increase its wholesale tax which will affect most gasoline products but not heating oil which isn't subject to the tax.

Currently the tax is 3.9 cents a gallon, and oil industry representatives said they expect it will likely increase four-tenths of a cent, which would require a corresponding increase in wholesale prices on gasoline.

John Ludgate, deputy chairman of the B.C. Energy Commission said no decision has been made yet on the oil companies' applications.

He said the commission, which disallowed a one cent a gallon increase which the companies had applied for last April, has three options:

The commission can stay within its guidelines, oppose the increases and extend the price freeze for a longer period, he said.

Or the commission can allow some or all of the increases sought by the oil companies.

Or, finally, he said, the commission could "get out altogether and let the increases flow through as they are approved by federal authority."

If the latter route was taken, he noted, the price of oil and gasoline in the province would increase anywhere from 4.5 to 6 cents a gallon.

"Whatever happens," he said. "It's going to be a political decision."

Meanwhile in Toronto, two of Canada's largest oil companies have scaled down their estimates of the country's crude oil reserves while warning of severe shortages by the early 1980s.

In briefs Monday to the National Energy Board, Imperial Oil Ltd. and Shell Canada Ltd. said that by 1980 Canada will no longer be able to supply traditional markets dependent on domestic crude oil.

Imperial lowered its estimate or reserves by a third.

The firms said they were discouraged by prospects for new oil from the Arctic, off the east coast, and the Alberta oil sands.

They based their pessimism on rapidly escalating costs to find and develop oil, lack of government incentives and high royalty and tax payments.

Because of this, the firms say Canada can no longer count on the speedy development of the Athabasca oil sands, or other areas such as the Arctic.

Imperial said it does not expect any new oil sand plants until at least 1985, three years later than the company's previous estimate.

Ford Close to Nomination

lines, and strategists for both sides acknowledged they lacked a firm count.

The other test of the convention before the presidential balloting is also scheduled to come up today. It will be on an omnibus foreign-policy platform plank the Reagan forces unveiled Monday.

However, the plank omitted any message of the controversial Panama Canal issue, and it was not certain that the Ford forces would bother to oppose it.

The mood of the opening night of the convention ranged from demonstrative affection when 1936 presidential candidate Alf Landon was introduced to partisan cheers when such GOP warhorses as vice-president Rockefeller and Sen. Barry Goldwater spoke.

Rockefeller, who was booed at the acrimonious 1964 convention won by Goldwater, was cheered this time despite occasional shouts for Reagan in the back of the hall.

The vice-president, and all the other principal speakers, won their applause for attacks on Carter. The central theme of the speeches was that Carter, for all his anti-Washington rhetoric, is a standard, big-spending, Democratic liberal.

"Jimmy Carter says he will never lie to us, but Jimmy Carter is the nominee of the party which gave us the original credibility gap," declared keynote speaker Sen. Howard H. Baker of Tennessee, a man many at this convention expect to be Ford's choice for vice-president.

Carter "claims to stand in the tradition of Harry Truman, but Harry Truman did not hide behind a fog of generalities," temporary chairman Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas said of Carter.

"America cannot afford Jimmy Carter," declared Mary Louise Smith, chairman of the Republican National Committee. "A Carter-Mondale ticket would be a different America, and it would be different in some very frightening ways."

the weather

Monday was a cold wet day in many parts of the province. Low record afternoon temperatures for the date were set at numerous stations across the south. Kamloops at 17 degrees was 6 degrees below their previous record for the date and with 48 millimeters of rain received nearly double their monthly normal of 27 millimeters. Revelstoke at 14 degrees tied a record for the date set back in 1899. The cool cloudy weather will persist in most regions through Wednesday. There will be a few showers along the south coast and in the interior today. There is the risk of isolated afternoon thundershowers in the interior. On Wednesday showers will be confined to the interior with extensive sunny areas in coastal regions.

Tow Terms Reached By ICBC

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Insurance Corporation of B.C. has signed a towing agreement with Unitow Services which guarantees the crown corporation basic towing and storage requirements in Vancouver for $56,250 a month, ICBC spokesman Bev Penhall said Monday.

Unitow Services is a newly-incorporated company comprising 15 independent tow truck operators who in the past had leased their services to larger towing companies.

Penhall said the company's bid was almost half that made last month by a consortium of three Greater Vancouver towing companies — Busters, Auto and Delta-Whalley Towing.

Cowichan Farm Co-Op Prospects Bright

DUNCAN (CP) — Sixteen shareholders share the wealth of fruit and vegetable crops which last year grossed $278,000 from the Cowichan Indian co-operative farm on 500 acres of reserve land at the mouth of the Cowichan River.

Bob Matchell, the only non-Indian employee who manages the farm, forecasts even better prospects this year for major crops of broccoli, cauliflower, sprouts, potatoes, carrots, corn and squash.

There also are 14 acres of raspberries and 10 acres of strawberries.

"Prospects are very bright," said Matchell. "This place has been totally accepted by the Cowichan people. They've been able to find jobs — get experience in work habits which they can't find in the outside world. The farm has taken a lot of people off welfare rolls."

Chief Wesley Modeste, member of the farm's board of directors, said the co-op started in 1966 as a committee of six land-owning band members who assembled the land in 10 and 20-acre parcels.

Total capital outlay so far is about $742,000, covering land clearance, flood control, buildings, machinery and equipment. The money came jointly from the department of Indian affairs, ARDA and co-op members.

Matchell said the co-op still is $250,000 in debt to the department of Indian affairs, but he sees no problem in paying it off.

Fresh produce is sold through four wholesalers in Victoria and Nanaimo, and this year's crop, to be bulk-frozen at a new processing plant at the co-op, has been sold to a food company near Vancouver.

Total frozen production for 1975 was 1,000 tons. Plant manager Charlotte Richardson said the plant employs 30 local women, while another 30 work in the fields. They are paid the minimum wage of $3 an hour.

The next step will be institutional packaging of frozen produce, said Ricardson.

The farm was the first such major native development, said Clarence Riach, district superintendent of economic development with the department of Indian affairs in Nanaimo.

Until recently, leasing land to non-Indian ventures was an economic mainstay.

"But now the bands," he said, "and Cowichan is the leading example, are interested in establishing their own businesses."

Riach said he can't visualize the farm getting much larger.

"It would be hard to manage a much bigger unit, but there are market spin-offs expected. Eventually there will be $5 million annual gross.

Fringe benefits are important, said Riach.

"Out of the 80 or so farm workers, the majority weren't used to any working timetables in their lives. But the workforce has very little turnover and seems to have given them pride."

Economy Premiers' Top Topic

EDMONTON (CP) — The state of Canada's economy will be the primary subject discussed at the 17th annual provincial premiers' conference which opens Wednesday at a 63-year-old restored mansion.

Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed, conference chairman, says the 10 premiers will discuss a number of factors related to the economy.

"Where the economy is going, what particular role the provinces have to play in it, what are our views with regard to the post-control era, how serious is this matter of declining investments in Canada."

The economy and fiscal arrangements and shared-cost programs, agenda item No. 2, are expected to take up most of the discussion on the opening day of the conference.

"It will be very interesting and significant to hear the provincial reactions from across the country with regard to the anti-inflation program," Lougheed said, "first of all, an evaluation as to whether it's been significant and effective.

"And I'm sure we'll be getting into the question of what will happen in the post-control era . . . and how can the country economically move out from under these controls."

Federal-provincial relations will also get a going over during the closed-door conference, which will wind up Friday in Banff.

"We seem to be in an almost constant state of confrontation," Lougheed said.

Lougheed said the country "is facing some real stresses to unity" because of the wearing away of provincial strengths by a too-strong federal government. He said Ottawa's determined erosion of provincial powers is turning what used to be a co-operative federalism into a dominated federalism.

"There isn't a provincial government that isn't extremely upset with the Trudeau government . . . the problem lies in the fact that there seems to be a pretty determined effort by the Ottawa bureaucracy to dilute and erode (provincial) powers in any way they can."

Lougheed didn't forsee lengthy discussions on another controversial topic, patriation of the constitution

When the premiers get to the Banff Springs Hotel, they will face pickets from Calgary's strike committee. Committee chairman Phil Hall said the demonstration will be orderly and demonstrators will carry signs asking for a repeal of federal wage and price-control legislation.

Lougheed said a general strike called by the Canadian Labor Congress for Oct. 14 will probably be discussed at the conference.

Jumblatt Vows Fight to Death

BEIRUT (AP) — Leftist leader Kamal Jumblatt vowed today to fight to the death against Christian and Syrian forces trying to drive his Lebanese Moslems and their Palestinian allies from the mountains east of this Lebanese capital.

"We will not withdraw as much as one iota," Jumblatt said. "We will defend our positons in the mountain area because it is for us a battle for survival."

The Libyan undersecretary for foreign affairs, Abu Zeid Dourdah, conferred with Jumblatt and Palestinian chieftain Yasser Arafat. The Moslems' Beirut Radio said he told them Libya will continue its unlimited support of their forces.

Jumblatt's statement defied an ultimatum from Christian President Suleiman Franjieh, who in a broadcast Monday night said the Christians will not stop fighting until the Palestinians returned to their 15 refugee camps and observed long dead agreementes restricting their military activity in Lebanon.

Since the fall of the Tel Zaatar camp last week, the Christians have been massing forces in the Meten area 18 miles east of the capital with the announced intention of ousting Moslem and Palestinian forces occupying traditionally Christian towns and villages in the mountains.

The Christians said that Syrian troops occupied the town of Hammana, cutting a key supply route to the Moslems and Palestinians on the mountain front. A Christian broadcast said a second Syrian column advanced into the mountain town of Bhamdoun, 12 miles east of Beirut, and took over an intersection commanding another supply route to the leftists.

Palestinian officials denied the Christian reports and said the action was still confined to artillery and rocket exchanges that were no more intense than usual.

Western reporters who visited the area Monday saw no large Syrian troop movements. But some reports said the Syrians advanced during the evening, after the reporters left.

Meanwhile, fighting continued with machine-guns, mortars and hand grenades in Beirut's devastated commercial sector and between the Chiyah and Ein Rummaneh suburbs. The night's casualty toll was estimated at about 70 killed and 100 wounded.

SKATEBOARD RISK CITED

OTTAWA (CP) — Skateboards should be used only by those prepared to risk injury even though the newer models are safer than 1960's models, the Canada Safety Council said in a written statement Monday.

Skateboards, regaining popularity and even snazzier than they used to be, are labelled by the council as risky, unstable devices which should not be used on any public sidewalk, road or hill.

Sides Study B.C. Hydro Report

VANCOUVER (CP) — The report of industrial inquiry commissioner Hugh Ladner into the labor dispute at B.C. Hydro has been given to the crown corporation and the Office and Technical Employees Union. (OTEU).

Both sides are studying the non-binding report and withheld comment until today at the earliest.

Ladner, a Vancouver lawyer, was appointed by Labor Minister Allan Williams July 29 after Hydro and the OTEU reached an impasse on settlement of a new contract.

Union members staged scattered walkouts in early July and the utility responded later in the month with selective lockouts.

The union wants a six per-cent wage increase, retroactive to June 1, 1975, and a further 13 per cent from April 1 of this year.

Hydro has offered an eight-per-cent increase from April 1.

The OTEU represents about 3,500 employees at Hydro. Monthly salaries range from $708 to $827 for clerk-typists; $777 to $1,110 for meter readers; $1,278 to $1,534 for program analysts and senior draftsmen and $1,506 to $1,814 for senior chemists and systems analysts.

Gas Mask Sewage Protest

MONTREAL (CP) — A university professor has started wearing a gas mask while shopping to protest the presence of a pipe disgorging untreated sewage into the Milles-Iles River near his home in Rosemere, about 15 miles north of here.

Yves Laberge of the University of Quebec said every proper channel has been tried "and we've been lied to by everybody."

"Right now there are more than 100 gallons of sewage an hour flowing into the channel — right beside a restaurant."

About 300 Rosemere residents have been plagued by stench from the ra wsewage all summer although Quebec Goldbloom said in February that plans for a sewage extension pipe were submitted and that construction would be completed by spring.

The offensive pipe was supposed to be a temporary solution to the problem of possible water supply contamination last summer.

At that time the line dumping sewage into the river was only 300 feet from the water intake pipe.

U.S. PULLOUT URGED

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — North Korean Premier Pak Sung Chul told the non-aligned summit conference today that the U.S. has 1,000 nuclear warheads and 400,000 troops in South Korea.

Pak's demand for the withdrawal of all U.S. forces from Korea was seconded by President Tito of Yugoslavia, who told the 85-country conference that "The Middle East is the most dangerous hotbed of crisis today," and "Israel, supported by some big powers, is the mtin cause."

The North Korean's figure of 400,000 U.S. troops is 10 times the number the U.S. government says it has in South Korea. Washington has never given any information on its nuclear arsenal in Korea.

"The real danger of war now in Korea is not 'the threat of southward aggression' as clamored about by the United States and the South Korean authorities but the threat of northward aggression from the South," Pak declared.

"Unless this danger of war is removed in advance, new war, including nuclear war, may break out again in Korea, which would be expanded to a war of Asian-wide and worldwide scale."

South Korea was not invited to the conference.

Although the conference will adopt a lengthy political declaration, most of the delegates feel that with the end of colonialism everywhere except southern Africa, they have achieved their major political goal. Now they are concerned with their campaign on the economic front.

The developing countries complain that what they get for the basic commodities and raw materials they sell never keeps up with the increasingly higher prices they must pay for manufactured goods from the industrialized countries.

PUBLICITY LEADS TO RETURN OF DOG

Mrs. Harold Handlen of 1256 Walnut credits newspaper stories and advertisements with persuading a man who had taken her dog almost a week ago to return it Monday night.

Sarah, a five-month-old Irish setter valued at $300, disappeared last Tuesday night.

Mrs. Handlen said today the man admitted he had picked the puppy up on Walnut.

Paul Mazzie, 12, of 253 Asquith, and Fred Abraham, 13, of 1610 Denman, told Mrs. Handlen they saw a man putting a belt around Sarah's collar at Bay and Quadra.

The boys recognized the puppy but the man said it couldn't be Sarah because he had found her too far away from the Handlen home.

Matter of Principle?

Although a withdrawal of services by Victoria's firemen cannot be condoned under any circumstances, it is not hard to sympathize with the 104 members of the city local of the International Firefighters Association.

The city has treated them shabbily in 1976 contract negotiations. After having caved in last year to other city employees who struck for three months, the city has adopted a new tough line everywhere else trying to save money at the expense of others who weren't lucky enough to benefit by the Canadian Union of Public Employees' generous contract.

Forbidden by law from striking, the firemen invoked the arbitration clause in the B.C. labor code which allows police and firefighters to invoke arbitration to settle their dispute. Their employers do not enjoy the privilege; it's a trade-off for giving up the right to strike which every other worker in B.C. has.

So the firemen won their case last month, with the arbitrator agreeing that Victoria firemen should be paid the same as their Vancouver brothers. He did not set a pay figure but tied the Victoria firefighters' contract to the outcome of the Vancouver negotiations.

Council's reaction was to appeal the arbitrator's decision in the courts, which is its perfect legal right. But, in our opinion, council is stubbornly standing on principle. By carrying its case to all possible lengths in attempting to prove a point, council also runs the danger of bringing a firemen's strike on itself and the charges — carrying some justification — that it is trying to wreck the union through bankruptcy.

And for what?

No Victoria firemen will very soon be earning what his Vancouver counterpart earns. The Vancouver firefighters' contract now is tied up in arbitration and it may be months before a decision is made. And under the terms of provincial anti-inflation legislation, any wage agreement affecting municipal employees must be vetted by the federal Anti-Inflation Board for conformity to the eight per cent guideline. The AIB's current backlog of cases is four or five months, meaning that it will be sometime early next year before a pay raise would go into effect, which is coincidentally about the same time the city could expect a court ruling on its appeal.

Why the mayor and aldermen, who are supposed to be politicians, versed in the art of the possible, can't see the advantages of letting the AIB handle it rather than going through the courts is difficult to understand. The former is an escape route, a path back to better relations with city firemen.

Ben Cartwright for Prime Minister?

United States presidential hopefuls have a strange penchant for surrounding themselves with coveys of celebrities. Like Bedouin goatherds whose wealth is measured in terms of their flocks, the presidential candidate with the sleekest and best herd of "stars" is supposed to assume greater stature in the eyes of the American electorate.

It is a bizarre phenomenon repeated almost nowhere else in the western world. Imagine Pierre Trudeau bracketed by Wayne and Shuster. Joe Clark on the road with Farley Mowat. Ed Broadbent serenaded by Gordon Lightfoot. The Canadian electorate would be appalled by the mixture of mediums. It's difficult enough to figure out Canadian political messages without having them confused by a song and dance routine.

In the United States, though, things tend to be black and white. Celebrities who portray characters glowing with traditional U.S. values line up behind conservative candidates. Others, who play anti-heroes or anti-heroines, cast their lot with more progressive candidates. For example Jimmy Carter's coterie includes Alan Alda, the star of MASH, Shirley MacLaine and Warren Beatty. John Wayne and Efrem Zimbalist, the righteous star of television's FBI, are waving flags for Ronald Reagan. U.S. President Gerald Ford has Eva Gabor, Cary Grant, Glenn Ford and other elderly stars in his flock.

Does life imitate art or does art imitate life? When television first began to throttle reason, cynics suggested that style would eventually replace substance and people would be elected on the basis of charm, grace or an image of goodness that could be "sold" on television. Twenty-five years later it is possible that a former movie star may become the president of the United States.

Even here in British Columbia, with its lingering frontier mythologies, Premier Bennett's heavy beard is cause for as much comment as the substance of what he says on television. Who knows? Perhaps the day will come when the Liberal party woos Lorne Greene from his southern California redoubt and Ben Cartwright will become prime minister of Canada. Joe Clark wouldn't have a chance against such homespun goodness.

MAURICE WESTERN

Port Alberni Is Number 3!

OTTAWA — The department of national revenue and taxation, contrary to the notions of the disaffected, is not ungrateful. It takes but, in its own fashion, it also rewards, publishing an annual honors list of communities which have exerted themselves to make life tolerable for their governors.

The list is unusual because it does not stop with the medallists, although a special release pays tribute to the most deserving; Sept-Iles, Quebec, Oakville, Ont., and Port Alberni, B.C. in that order. It runs on relentlessly, however, to record those who have done moderately well and to expose others who have failed miserably to meet the expectations of Bud Cullen's department.

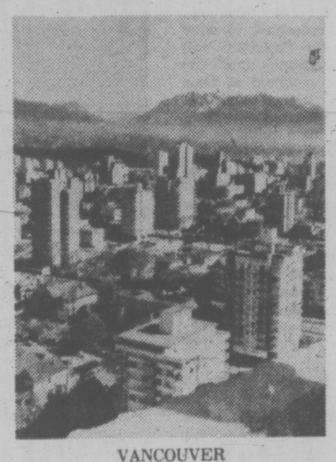
Pleasant Surprises

In the annual "Green Book," rankings are based on average income. While the order varies a bit from year to year, a few consistently meritorious communities appear again and again among the big ten. Most of them are big union towns, including Ottawa (no. 6 in the latest listings) which is the stronghold of the public service unions. These placings, based on 1974 returns, may have helped to persuade the government that well organized labor is suffering less from want and deprivation than the casual reader of CLC literature might assume.

For tax collectors, there are always a few pleasant surprises. On this occasion national revenue has every reason to applaud the public-spirited efforts of Swift Current, Sask. citizens who have advanced from 53rd to 10th place in a matter of two years. Indeed, Swift Current is the only prairie community to achieve the magic circle.

Cullen's listings support some but not all of the notions about the distribution of income which are widely held in Ottawa. It is generally assumed — correctly on the evidence of the Green Book — that incomes are lowest in Atlantic Canada. Quebec is also considered to be relatively poor while Ontario is well-to-do. Wealth is associated with the west, especially with Alberta. It is taken for granted in the east that citizens of the foothills province are Croesus-rich, beneficiaries of the petroleum industry.

The experience of the department throws considerable doubt on some of these assumptions. From an examination of income standings in major centres in



VANCOUVER
. . . city is number 12

Quebec and Alberta based, of course, on those who made returns, some rather surprising conclusions emerge.

On average, the taxpayer in Montreal (which ranks eighth) earns more than the taxpayer in Calgary (which ranks 25th).

On average, the taxpayer in Quebec City (13 or Jonquiere (16) is considerably better off than his counterpart in Edmonton (33).

On average, the taxpayer in Hull (21) is statistically superior to the contributor in Medicine Hat, which places 45th on the revenue list.

It is clearly preferable, from an income standpoint, to toil in Rimouski (28) or Levis (30) or Rouyn and Noranda (31) or Sorel (32) or Chicoutimi (34) than to collect one's pay cheque in Lethbridge (52).

And who would exchange the average annual income enjoyed by citizens of Trois-Rivieres (40) Sherbrooke (44) or Longeuil)48) with that obtainable in Red Deer (79)?

If 50 is the pass mark, some smaller Quebec centres (textile towns, for example) may be unfavorably regarded by national revenue. By the same standards, however, the exertions of taxpayers, even in larger prairie cities outside Alberta must be considered less than adequate. Only Regina makes it, coming 46th in the rankings.

West Not Too Rich

The income deficiencies of the others will be evident at a glance. Winnipeg (73), Brandon (91), Saskatoon (60), Moose Jaw (72), Portage (64), Yorkton (82), Prince Albert (67). Clearly, prairie citizens will have to make greater efforts if government is to continue to live in the style to which it has become accustomed.

One must look to British Columbia for examples of better performance. The tax harvest has been good in Vancouver, the largest west coast centre, which takes 12th place in the income tables. Even so, Vancouver is still behind Montreal which has moved from 37th to eighth place in a matter of two years.

To much may be read into figures which take no account of non-taxable returns. It does appear, however, that some common assumptions are misleading. At least in the places listed by national revenue, the average taxpayer is considerably less well off than one would conclude from much that is said and written in central Canada.

JAMES RESTON

GOP: A Party or Ideology?

KANSAS CITY — The uncommitted delegates here are going to get very little guidance from the historians, for while there has been a factional struggle between moderates and conservatives in most Republican presidential conventions since 1940, none has been precisely like this year's tussle between President Ford and former governor Ronald Reagan of California.

The differences this time are fairly obvious. While no presiding president in this century has been denied his party's nomination if he really fought for it, Gerald Ford has never been elected president or vice-president.

This is something entirely new in American presidential history and makes more reasonable Reagan's challenge. But it does not remove the widely accepted political rule that denying the nomination to a president weakens the party in power and threatens its defeat.

Only four times in the history of the republic has a president sought and lost his party's presidential nomination and on three of the four occasions, the successful challenger consequently lost the election.

In 1852, President Millard Fillmore, a Whig, was defeated for the nomination by Winfield Scott, who in turn lost the election to Franklin Pierce, a Democrat of New Hampshire.

Popular Hero

In 1856, President Pierce was defeated for the Democratic nomination by James Buchanan of Pennsylvania, who defeated John C. Fremont for the presidency. This was the only case in which a candidate not only prevailed over his own president for the nomination but went on to win.

In 1868, President Andrew Johnson lost the nomination to Horatio Seymour, who was then defeated in the election by Ulysses S. Grant.

In 1884, President Chester A. Arthur, a Republican, lost his party's nomination to James G. Blaine, who was then defeated by Grover Cleveland.

Teddy Roosevelt's insurgency in 1912 did not deny William Howard Taft the Republican nomination, but it split the party and lost the election to Woodrow Wilson. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower challenged Robert Taft, the titular leader of the Republicans, in 1952 after a delegate scramble similar to the Ford-Reagan struggle and went on to a spectacular victory, but he was a spectacularly popular military hero and political outsider challenging a prominent senator, not a president.

So the Republican delegates gathered here have no clear precedents to guide them. They have only their own politieal commitments and prejudices, and their own judgments about whether Ford or Reagan is more likely to defeat former governor Jimmy Carter of Georgia, who has the nomination of the "majority" Democratic party and has demonstrated considerable support among former Republican voters in the South, the border states and the Middle West.

The 1952 Republican convention in Chicago is perhaps more similar to this Kansas City convention than any other of modern times, at least in the narrow margin of committed delegates at the opening gavel.

In that year, Robert Taft, with a long and distinguished record of service in the senate and in partisan opposition to presidents Roosevelt and Truman, was the favorite of the party's conservatives. He had been defeated for the nomination by the eastern wing of his party in 1940 (by Wendell L. Willkie) and in 1948 by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York. But he retained the loyalty of Republican conservatives, who insisted that Dewey had lost twice by being too liberal in 1944 and too mild in 1948.

RONALD REAGAN

Beyond this conservative ideological preference for Taft and Reagan, the comparison between the Chicago convention of 1952 and this week's Kansas City meeting breaks down. Taft and Eisenhower were much further apart on foreign policy than are Ford and Reagan, despite the latter's attacks on detente, Panama and Henry Kissinger.

Reagan is much more attractive personally and even more flexible than was Taft, who once said he thought it was "dishonest to be tactful" and would probably have regarded as a dishonorable repudiation of his conservative philosophy the designation as vice-presidential candidate of a liberal like Sen. Richard S. Schweiker of Pennsylvania.

Also, the battle for delegates in the 1952 convention makes the Ford-Reagan scramble look like a gentlemen's courteous disagreement. It was a brawl, the bitterest Republican convention struggle since Teddy Roosevelt took his Bull Moosers for a walk in 1912. It was carried into a vicious battle between the contending Taft and Eisenhower delegations from the South, and into a fierce parliamentary debate over rules in the credentials committee and on the floor of the convention.

A Gallup poll at the beginning of the 1952 convention, while the two men were almost as close in the delegate race as Ford and Reagan are now, showed Eisenhower winning by a landslide over Stevenson, 59 to 31 per cent, and Taft losing to Stevenson by a point, 45 to 44 per cent.

The delegates here at Kansas City have no such evidence to help them decide. The polls show both candidates losing to Carter as of now, and while this is likely to improve once the Republican delegates make up their mind, they are still stuck with a choice of risks. Do they risk dumping and in effect repudiating their own president, or do they risk everything on an attractive former governor of California who knows all the arts of television and Hollywood?

Need a Coalition

Historically, their choice is more serious than that. Once more, as in the struggles between William Howard Taft and Teddy Roosevelt; between Robert Taft and Willkie and Dewey; and between Barry Goldwater and Nelson Rockefeller, they are going to have to decide whether to fight Carter and the Democrats primarily on conservative ideological grounds with Reagan, or go with President Ford, who, though conservative, is trying to use the presidency to put together a coalition of Republican, independent and Democratic voters.

In the last 44 years, the Democrats have occupied the White House for 28 years and the Republicans for 16 — eight during the Eisenhower "consensus" presidency and eight during the administrations of presidents Nixon and Ford, who also talked conservatively but appealed to moderate independents and Democrats. Even Reagan, by designating the liberal Schweiker as his running mate, has conceded that his ideological base is too narrow and must be expanded into a "coalition."

Thus, the delegates here are confronted not only with the choice of a presidential nominee but also with a decision whether to concentrate on their conservative ideology or organize a coalition of divergent voters with different ideologies that can defeat the Democratic coalition in November. Henry Fairlie, the British journalist, writing in The New Republic, puts the question to the Republicans more bluntly: "Are they an ideological movement or are they a political party?"

Righteous Stand

After the way Trudeau treated the Republic of China Olympic committee, I was moved to write Mr. Ting in Taipei, who is vice-president, and tell him how I felt and many others in this country felt.

I have just received a reply from the president of the committee, Mr. Shen Chia-Ming.

"I wish to convey to you my sincere appreciation and deep gratitude for your staunch support graciously rendered to us on the issue of the participation of the Republic of China athletes in the Montreal Olympic games, particularly your righteous stand in support of using our legitimate name in this event.

"The arbitrary measure taken by the Canadian government under the political pressure from the outside flagrantly constituted a breach of its own promise and violation of the long established Olympic principles and rules. You must be aware that our decision of withdrawing from the games was made in defence of not only our own honor but also the integrity of the spirit and principles of the olympiad. In this connection we are very grateful for your understanding and encouragement.

"Our delegation returned to Taipei on July 19. We are deeply touched by the outpourings of your warm sentiment and response . . .

Olympic Babel

I am pleased to report that at the Montreal Olympics a small step was made to bridge the language barriers. A book entitled Hello, Friend was presented to each athlete at the games. This is a phrase book with Esperanto as the key language along with English and French. Approximately, six other languages were added for the benefit of other large language blocks. His Excellency Roger Rousseau, president and commissioner-general of the Organizing Committee of the Olympic Games wrote in the foreword of Hello Friend, "I would like to warmly congratulate the Canadian Esperanto Association for the publication of this brochure . . . Esperanto's goal is clear: to bring people of all nations closer together through the medium of a common language."

During the games of the 21st Olympiad, thousands of athletes and other representatives of world youth from 130 countries will be in Montreal for two weeks of gala festivities. For them, this brochure will be more than a simple dictionary because it will allow residents of the Olympic Village and the International Youth Camp to exchange thoughts and ideas despite the multiplicity of languages that world gatherings entail."

Despite the phrase book and the good intentions, the very athletes which this year broke world records every day were reduced to the level of helpless infants in the Olympic Village. Phrase books will never solve the problem. The only correct approach is to teach a World Language to everybody as a second language beside the native language. As Margaret Mead wrote in her July article for the Mainliner of Los Angeles, "If we wanted to find such a language, outfit it as a universal second language, launch it by satellite, we could have the whole world speaking it in a decade." — Wallace G. du Temple, Director, Information Department, Canadian Esperanto Association, Sidney.

FM Censorship

For two weeks I have been trying to get myself into a sufficiently reasoned frame of mind to write a coherent letter to you about the latest action of the CRTC in ordering the banning of American FM stations on cable.

I can't do it! As soon as I begin to write, reason and calm desert me. Before I put down another word I know I'm wasting my time. Who cares about FM radio? When did the non-elected CRTC ever pay the slightest attention to the wishes of the free citizen?

But if I don't make even this futile and trivial gesture, and if you, Mr. Editor with your greater clout, don't scream like hell about this gross and disgraceful action, what will stop the CRTC (or another bureaucratic octopus just like it) from telling you that you can't receive UPI or AP? And if they succeed in this censorship of FM signals, what will stop them next in prohibiting us from owning or erecting an antenna?

That this is censorship and thought control by government is undeniable. It may lack the heavy hand of the iron curtain jammers, or the open contempt of the book burners, but if anything it's even more disgusting because of the cowardly and under the counter way in which it's brought about. No fanfare announcement of policy by a minister. No government ready to stand or fall on principle. Just a paragraph in one of a million memos. To the cable company: Jam these stations or we put you out of business.

What are you going to do about it? — David Gurr, 2716 Queenswood Drive.

Ghost of Kansas City: A Dream Gone Sour

By RICHARD J. WHALEN
Washington Post

He will not be seen or heard, and his name will not be spoken above a whisper, yet Richard Milhous Nixon will haunt this week's Republican National Convention. The delegates gathered in Kansas City are the faithful, last-ditch loyalists whom he betrayed, and their plight is the result of the unmaking of his presidency. Nixon was the grand strategist of party realignment, the master builder of the New Majority. Now he is the unmentionable presence that hangs, shroudlike, above the incumbent president. If the prisoner of San Clemente watches the convention proceedings on television, he doubtless will feel a pang of self-pitying regret at what might have been.

If all had gone according to Nixon's final game plan, rather than down the Watergate rathole, this convention would have been the climactic triumph and vindication of his career. After receiving the delegates' homage, the retiring president would have stirred their deeper gratitude by giving them an excellent chance to hold the White House for another eight years. Almost certainly, his chosen successor and the party's nominee would have been John Connally, groomed for leadership by service as secretary of state.

Connally, the Texas Democrat turned Nixon Republican, would have personified the GOP's winning "Southern Strategy." He and the other bright, ambitious newcomers flocking into the party would have shaken and energized it, displacing the old regulars and ideologues. For example, in Nixon's 1976 scenario, Congressman Jerry Ford, that Grand Rapids exemplar of solid-mahogany establishment Republicanism, would have had only his familiar minor role as gavel-pounding convention chairman. And former California Gov. Ronald Reagan would have been merely one of several rightwing cheerleaders.

Nixon in China . . . a game plan down the rathole

Join Winners

In retrospect, the 1972 presidential election landslide would have been seen as an historic opportunity, fully seized and consolidated in the congressional elections two years later. Disaffected Democrats, rightward-leaning independents, former supporters of Gov. George Wallace, and Northern ethnics and Catholics would have responded to the new Republican program based on economic activism and social-cultural conservatism. As these voters joined the New Majority and gave the Republicans near control of the Congress, many Democratic politicians, especially in the South, would have followed Connally's lead in joining the winning side.

It is necessary to recall these soaring Republican hopes of only four years ago in order to give outsiders some idea of the depth of the post-Watergate disillusionment and the current despair caused by the divisive choice between Ford and Reagan. Nothing worked out as Nixon planned. His 1972 landslide remained essentially a personal victory, which the party did not share. By 1974, the historic opportunity was irretrievably lost. After Watergate, the voters punished Republican office seekers at all levels for the criminal arrogance and stupidity of the president and his henchmen.

Today, the party of Nixon, Agnew and the worst inflation-recession in four decades is ashamed of its immediate past and afraid of its immediate future with good reason. It is a party without a head. President-by-accident Ford, like the sorcerer's apprentice, is still trying to turn incumbency into a magic wand but he cannot. Challenger Reagan, a conservative leader with a national following, underestimated the GOP electorate's standpat instinct in the early primaries and overestimated its tolerance of right-wing theorizing, as in the case of his ill-considered scheme to cut $90 billion from the federal budget. Both men have made progress to this point mainly through each other's mistakes.

Four years ago, any Republican who predicted a Ford-Reagan contest for the presidential nomination in 1976 would have been given a quiet place in the shade and cold compresses. The pair simply did not figure in the party's future, as it was then defined. What has happened, almost incidentally amid the Nixon scandals, is that the Republican party has lost its future and been thrown back on its inglorious past. Ford represents stolid acceptance of permanent minority status: the traditional treadmill to oblivion. Reagan represents lively defiance of odds, polls and perhaps common sense, the headlong rush involving high risks and, just possibly, high rewards: the Goldwaterite romantic impulse.

President Ford, with his frequent use of the veto, perfectly exemplifies the negative Republican approach to governing. Such tactical nay-saying is applauded by businessmen who are continually on the defensive against "reform" schemes dreamed-up by the Democratic congressional majority, but who have no long-term strategic view of how the U.S. economic system and the place of business in our society might be improved. The ideology encountered in the locker room at Burning Tree could pass for conservatism a generation ago. Now, however, those Americans who tell pollsters by better than two to one that they want the country to move in a "more conservative direction" have something quite different in mind, something to which Republicans thus far have been able to give only lip service.

Cultural Trend

The "conservative" trend in America today is social and cultural, not economic, and it is primarily concerned with values and value-shaping institutions: the family, the church, the neighborhood, the school. While almost six out of 10 Americans describe themselves as "conservatives," fewer than one in five accept the Republican label. The evident reason is that the GOP, as now organized and directed, seems to have very little to do with conserving the things that matter to middle-class Americans. While Republicans accept the cultural orientation of American politics at the level of sloganeering ("Republicanism—it's a question of values," proclaims the motto of the GOP national committee), they display an aversion to the positive power of government to uphold those values and concretely reward and assist those who cherish them.

In this brief catalogue of Republican symptoms, one is outstanding: it is the party's fatal fascination with the South as the source of a cure-all, the presumed new regional "bastion" that would guarantee a generation of Republican presidential dominance. For the past two decades, whenever GOP strategists worried about the long-term anti-Republican trends in their former strongholds in the Northeast and the Midwest, they consoled themselves by looking away to Dixieland and dreaming of the coalesence of a new kind of solid South around Republican principles. From 1948 to 1972, the trend ran favorably, both at the presidential level and, after the Goldwater campaign, at the state and local levels in Florida, Virginia, Tennessee, Texas and the Carolinas.

But Watergate halted the trend toward party realignment. Since then, Southern Republicanism, shallow-rooted in the new cities and the suburban country clubs, has been fading. Now, the Democrats' surprising nomination of a Deep Southerner gives the South of red-clay farms and piney-woods hamlets the chance to embrace its native son by overwhelming majorities. The Wallaceites in the South, who gave Nixon almost 80 per cent of their vote in 1972, are going home behind Jimmy Carter.

But which way lies "home" for the Republicans? The increasingly bitter struggle between Ford and Reagan has never been ideological, for both are conservatives. Rather, the issue between them has been capacity for leadership, in which the strengths and weaknesses of their opposite personalities have tended to cancel each other out. Ford is plodding and inept but reassuringly predictable. Reagan is charismatic and dazzling but worrisomely erratic.

FDR Responsible

Before considering the Ford-Reagan contest as it comes down to the wire at the convention, we may usefully review the condition of Republicanism and how it got that way. It is not Nixon's fault—that should be made perfectly clear. Long before Watergate, the Republican party was sick. The malady can be traced to those watershed years of modern American politics, the 30s, when Franklin Roosevelt successfully scape-goated the Republicans for the Depression, and they lapsed into abstract ideological attacks on the New Deal as an incipient, home-grown radicalism bearing a suspicious resemblance to the Muscovite brand. As their numbers dwindled, Republicans lost touch with the ordinary sentiments of the electorate and came more and more to resemble a small, exclusive fraternity. They also entered into an alliance with corporate big business, based on reflexive hostility to "big government" which has hurt both partners.

Since 1952, the Republicans have enjoyed marked success at the presidential level of American politics, which has diverted attention from the disastrous decline of party strength at the local, state and congressional levels. Below the presidency, the GOP suffers from what theorist Kevin Phillips calls "critical non-mass," the decline in party strength to the point where the decay is irreversible.

Those who solemnly warn that the Republicans must avoid "another 1964" overlook a relevant fact: the GOP is in worse shape today than it was in 1965 after the Goldwater debacle. A few grim statistics attest to the withering of grass-sroots Republicanism. In 1965, the Republicans still held the governorships of five of the 10 largest states. Today, they hold just two, and a total of only 13 out of 50. Court-ordered reapportionment and the indiscriminately punitive 1974 elections have all but wiped out Republican-controlled state legislatures. The Democrats now control the governorship and a majority of the legislature in 28 states, the Republicans in only two.

As the advantages of incumbency increase at every level of government, Republican challengers face longer odds, and more seats of power become "safe" Democratic. A party that cannot offer able young people even a remote chance of upward mobility and an eventual share of governing responsibility, becomes demoralized, losing the youthful and the mature as well. This has happened to the GOP as the Democrats have achieved a record of congressional control unprecedented in modern U.S. History: 22 consecutive years and 39 out of the past 43 years. In choosing the title for his blunt-spoken new book, "The Futile System," House Minority Leader John Rhodes summed up the frustrated view from the outside.

This growing weakness of the Republican party in state and national legislatures would have been deeply alarming, and might have produced serious attempts to correct it, if GOP lawmakers had wished to enact laws. Typically, they do not. The characteristic Republican stance is athwart the path of whatever the Democrats are proposing, sometimes a prudent public service, but scarcely one to set pulses racing and dedicated footsoldiers marching.

The appeal of safe mediocrity appears to be working for Ford as the closely divided delegates prepare to cast their ballots. In the campaign against Carter, for which White House insiders say planning has scarcely begun, Ford presumably would adopt the same passive and reactive stance as during the long contest with Reagan. He would continue to depend on his incumbency somehow to provide its own justification. And he would depend, crucially, on Carter to make a major blunder, suddenly reveal risky character traits or allow himself to be co-opted by the left-liberals. Ford stands ready to accept victory if Carter will defeat himself. The president's message to the Republican delegates: Hang on and pray for a miracle before Nov. 2.

Reagan's come-from-behind struggle against an incumbent president is his best credential with the GOP convention. For his strategy against Carter would be: attack, attack, attack. Given the extreme volatility of the electorate this year, reflected in the overnight melting away of big poll margins in several primary states, it is possible to believe that Reagan, the most gifted media politician in America, just might overtake Carter. The challenger's message to the delegates: Pray if you will but trust my frontal assault.

As a former Democrat who became a Republican in order to back Goldwater, Reagan keeps alive the slender hope of realignment while Ford does not. In 1972, Senator George McGovern received only 48 per cent of the votes of Catholics, a sharp drop from normal two-to-one Democratic majorities. According to some polls, "born-again" Baptist Carter fares equally poorly among Northern Catholics, a weakness having at least as much to do with cultural distance as religious prejudice. In any event, it offers an obvious vulnerability for the Republicans to exploit — if they can.

Desperate Choice

So few are prominent Catholic office-holders in the GOP that John Volpe, the former governor of Massachusetts and current ambassador to Italy, still makes the short lists. In his bold, desperate choice of liberal Sen. Richard Schweiker of Pennsylvania as his prospective running mate, Reagan reached out for the best available alternative. The cool reaction to Schweiker among target delegates and populations in the Northeast underscores the embarrassing poverty of Republican choices.

Nevertheless, the supposed ideologue Reagan, faced with almost certain defeat if he stood pat on right-wing "principle," opted instead for a pragmatic, expedient chance to grasp the brass ring. He thus gave conservatives a liberating example and restored legitimacy to practical politics. Even if the Schweiker gambit fails, the move may be seen one day as a landmark event in the effort of the Republican party to survive by rediscovering the art of politics.

The question of Republican survival is very much open today. For Jimmy Carter, another centrist with bipartisan appeal, has adapted the Nixon "Southern strategy" to the Democratic side, and is driving toward his own New Majority attuned to the current conservative temper of the American electorate.

General Strike Waste of Time?

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — Will it be like Armistice Day used to be at 11 a.m.? Not for a few minutes but for 24 hours?

Will the trains and the planes and the buses stop? Will the 401 and the Trans-Canada and all the rest of the highways be clear of trucks and truckers?

Will the beer parlors and the taverns open? Will the streetcars run in Toronto? Will the infernal racket of the paper-machines in several scores of plants across the country from Grand Falls to Prince Albert to Powell River cease? Will the rip-rup of the chain saw go unsounded in the vast boreal lands of spruce and pine?

Will the CBC and all its "organized" affiliates be off the air? Will the stories flow in and get into print from the wire services and from the reporters of the big, unionized dailies like the Toronto Star?

Where will the picket lines be? At 24 Sussex Drive or at Jean-Luc Pepin's high-rise office?

Will the zealots of the CLC's Quebec City gathering fans across the country stake out the homes of the federal members of Parliament, and, with their placards, remind those who voted for the anti-inflation legislation that the law and its application are disliked and unfair?

In what different form — on that day — will the message come from Joe Morris and Shirley Carr and Bill Mahoney, etc., that the control of wages is unjust?

How many unorganized workers will forego work on the great day, joining the 2.3 million-plus trade unionists?

And will all the 2.3 million unionists take the day off? The Teamsters? The hospital workers in Quebec? The organized faculties of a number of Ontario universities? The caucus employees of the NDP?

And if we assume, just in crass dollar terms, that two million unionists accept the CLC leadership, and if the average individual pay for the day sacrificed is $40 (about right . . .), is this roughly $70 million loss of pay worth it? Worth it in terms of influence and political leverage?

I am a trade unionist out of a family with a parent who enthusiastically joined a union in 1913 and believed in it through 50 years.

I know something about the theories and practices of "general strikes" because I grew up listening to those who were on the picket lines in Winnipeg in 1919 and who believed in the OBU. I can remember the glow of honest nostalgia over lost opportunities from the mouths of former Wobblies.

A thrill still runs up my spine when reading about the bravery of the miners at Estevan in 1931.

I can hardly imagine a more significant triumph of social justice than the victory of the auto workers in Oshawa in 1937 a smashing victory over Premier Hepburn's mining baron pals and their mouthpiece, the Toronto Globe and Mail.

Even Pierre Elliott Trudeau becomes worthy and admirable when I follow his work and analysis in the famous asbestos strike of 1949.

All this is my heritage: It's mine and millions of other Canadians; not just that of Joe Morris or David Archer or David Lewis or Louis Laberge or something known as "the CLC."

Other than to demonstrate militancy what the hell is this day of general strike to achieve? If the CLC leaders think the AIB system is bad enough to stop the country's wheels for 24 hours, why not stop them for a week or two and put this government, the authors of it all, into retreat?

If the CLC would collect, apportion and spend $70 million on direct political propaganda against the anti-inflation system and the government, it might well make Trudeau and company back away. Not least because big business and big industry dislike the program as much or more than big labor.

The strike is an essential instrument in a free society. The genuine general strike is the ultimate instrument for the underdog or the working class in seeking fair shares and downing oppression. Is this what the one-day general strike of October, 1976, will do?

Credit Reporting Planned

NEW YORK (AP) — TRW Inc., a diversified producer of electronic equipment, automotive parts and computer services, plans to expand into commercial credit reporting, a field dominated almost exclusively by Dun and Bradstreet Inc.

TRW's computerized system of credit information about businesses will be marketed through the National Association of Credit Management, which last week began urging its almost 40,000 members to switch to the TRW system.

Like Dun and Bradstreet, the TRW system provides information about a company's operations, management, credit history, bank balances, and recent financial statements.

TRW will distribute its credit information by teleprinter from a computer in Anaheim, Calif., which has been programmed with information about 600,000 companies.

By 1978, it plans to have information on two million companies, Dun and Bradstreet has three million in its files.

Riders Rout Rivals

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders fullback Art Green gave a good indication of the debacle to follow when he battered his way through several Montreal Alouettes for an 11-yard gain the first time his team got the ball.

Seven plays later, halfback Molly McGee broke for an eight-yard touchdown run that started the Riders on their way to a 45-9 thrashing of the Alouettes in a Canadian Football League game Monday night.

In the end, it was tight end Tony Gabriel with three touchdown catches and quarterback Tom Clements with 21 completions on 28 passing attempts for 364 yards who were the Ottawa offensive stars.

But the 29,779 Lansdowne Park fans recognized the other key element in the Riders win with several choruses of "defence, defence" as the Ottawa defence corps trouped off the field in the late stages having destroyed the Als big-name offence.

Middle linebacker Larry Cameron and his mates will not soon be forgotten by the Als who endured a tremendous physical beating.

Als head coach Marv Levy was almost at a loss for words. "I really don't know what happened. What happened was one of those things you can't understand until it happens."

Riders coach George Brancato was pleased with his club's performance but wasn't authoring a forest of platitudes for his players.

After McGee's touchdown, the Riders defence made short work of the Als. Starting on his 45-yard line Clements passed to Gabriel for 21 yards, missed on his next attempt and then found Gabriel wide open and connected with him for a 49-yard major.

Shamrocks Take Series to Limit

VANCOUVER — Nirmal Dillon, the Western Lacrosse Association's newest and youngest coach, has experienced mixed emotion over Victoria Shamrocks' performances this year.

He has scowled on occasion but more often had reason to smile proudly as the Irish chugged to a first-place finish.

But pride in his charges was never more evident than after Monday's crucial 18-9 victory over Vancouver Burrards.

Disorganized and missing assignments at the start, the gritty Rocks put it all together over the final 40 minutes to force a seventh and deciding game in their best-of-seven playoff.

So, it all goes on the line Wednesday with the seventh game scheduled at Memorial Arena.

With a large number of Victoria supporters among the 2,560 fans on hand, the Shamrocks started poorly. After the first period, they trailed 6-1. But, getting the big lift from a sensational second-period performance, things changed dramatically.

Almost flawless in their execution, the Shamrocks outscored Vancouver 12-1 in the second and cruised to victory with 5-2 third period.

The second-period spree by Victoria routed Burrard goalie Dave Evans, a standout in earlier series games. Veteran Don Hamilton came in after Shamrocks went ahead 10-7 but couldn't hold the fired-up Irish. Shamrocks scored on their first three shots at Hamilton.

Dillon found it difficult to single out individual standouts. He termed it a "complete team effort," an observation supported by the fact that all but two of Victoria's attackers got on the scoresheet.

Joe McCrea, Mike Beaulac and veteran Ranjit Dillon all enjoyed five-point performances while Pete Rushton, Danny Green and Larry Bell picked up four points.

They all contributed and the excellent backup was supplied by George Grover. The Victoria netminder, especially effective in the final two periods, turned away 40 shots.

Cec's Amateur Status Probed

Cec Ferguson is in danger of losing his place on British Columbia's Willingdon Cup team.

He also may be declared ineligible to compete in the Canadian Amateur, scheduled to be played at Royal Colwood next week.

The bombshell burst at the weekend.

The amateur status of the 26-year-old Victorian is being checked by the Royal Canadian Golf Association because of a brochure that suggests Ferguson may turn professional next month.

Jim Gibson of Vancouver, president of the B.C. Golf Association and a member of the RCGA's amateur status committee, confirmed Monday that "some doubt has been raised." Enough doubt, he added, that Dave Mick another Victoria golfer, has been alerted to the possibility that he may play in the interprovincial team matches that start at Colwood next Wednesday.

Ferguson, who was in Tacoma playing in the U.S. Amateur qualifying trials Monday and was unavailable for comment, was scheduled to meet with Gibson today.

Today's meeting, however, was not expected to result in any action. That's expected later this week when the amateur status committee is scheduled to make a decision.

Ferguson, this year's Island Open champion, was the No. 2 qualifier for the B.C. team that also includes three Vancouver-area golfers — Doug Roxburgh, Johnny Russell and Don Griffiths. Mick was named team alternate.

While intent to turn professional is no longer a clear-cut violation of amateur standing, as it once was, Ferguson's status is being questioned because of a regulation that prohibits the "receiving or contracting to receive compensation" because of playing ability.

GOLF
ernie fedoruk

Ferguson, according to sources close to the golfer, is denying that he has signed any contract or agreement concerning a professional career.

If Ferguson can convince the RCGA, then he may be allowed to compete in next week's big show at Colwood.

Distribution of the brochure touched off the fireworks. The brochure or prospectus, distributed to Victoria sportsmen, offers "shares" in a syndicate that would raise money to sponsor Ferguson for a guaranteed, two-year stint on the U.S. tour.

An unidentified golf official in Victoria, sensing a violation of amateur status, obtained a copy of the brochure and submitted it to Gibson.

Gibson feels the brochure's distribution at this time "places everyone, including Cec, in a very difficult position." He added, however, that two members of the sponsoring syndicate have written the BCGA to say that Ferguson did not have anything to do with the brochure, or its distribution.

Those letters, plus his denial of having entered into any contractual agreement about playing as a professional, may allow Ferguson to play at Colwood next week.

The final decision rests with RCGA's amateur status committee.

Tennis Test At Cowichan

Marty Taylor of Victoria is defending champion in the men's singles and a favorite in this year's event is the 1971 winner, Mike Prineas of Seattle.

Only men's singles and doubles events are featured in the four-day tournament, which counts toward rankings and is limited to two players in each club in the Pacific Northwest.

FOUR COSMOS ON ALL-STARS

NEW YORK (AP) — Forwards Pele and Giorgi Chinaglia of New York Cosmos have been named to the North American Soccer League All-Star team.

In voting conducted by The Sporting News, four Cosmos and three Tampa Bay Rowdies made the squad. In addition to Pele and Chinaglia, Cosmos midfielder Ramon Mifflin and defender Keith Eddy were selected. Rowdies' goalkeeper Arnold Mausser, midfielder Rodney Marsh and defender Tommy Smith also were named to the team.

British star George Best, now with Los Angeles, joined Pele and Chinaglia at forward, while Bobby Moore of San Antonio and Mike England of Seattle were picked on defence. Midfielder Antonio Simoes of San Jose also made the all-stars.

Manuel's Love Affair

TORONTO (CP) — Manuel Orantes, the defending Canadian Open champion, continued his love affair with local tennis fans Monday night.

It was the charming Spaniards' fourth appearance at the $155,000 tournament—and as usual he charmed spectators with his grace and good humor.

"I always play well in Toronto," he said after downing Colombia's Jairo Velasco 6-3, 6-3 in opening-round play at the new $1-million tennis centre at York University. "The people are so nice that I try harder."

It took Orantes three tries to strike paydirt last year when he defeated Rumania's Illie Nastase 7-6, 6-0, 6-0 after being a bridesmaid to 1973 Open winner Tom Okker of the Netherlands and 1974 champion Guillermo Vilas of Argentina.

Last year's victory was marred by Nastase's behavior which led to a record fine of $6,000 imposed by an independent tennis tribunal in January.

Orantes went on last summer to win the U.S. Open at Forest Hills, N.Y., defeating Jimmy Connors in a tactically perfect straight set victory.

This year Orantes has been plagued with injuries and has only won three minor European tournaments.

In men's play, Czechoslovakia's Jan Kodes, ninth seeded, took three sets to retire Britain's Gerald Battrick 6-4, 1-6, 6-3.

Britain's Buster Mottram, No. 15 seed, blasted Spain's Juan Higueras 6-1, 6-0 and France's François Jauffret beat Britain's John Lloyd 1-6, 7-6, 6-3.

In women's action, top-seeded Britain's Sue Barker overcame nagging pain in her right wrist to overpower Germany's Iris Riedel, 6-3, 6-2.

Australian Lesley Hunt, the No. 5 seed, needed three sets to defeat Mary Struthers of the United States 6-1, 5-7, 6-2.

Sixth-seeded Cynthia Doerner of Australia beat Betsy Natelson of the U.S. 1-6, 6-0, 6-4.

In what is becoming the unfortunate custom at the Canadian Open, there were several last-minute scratches.

FIBAK CRUSHED

INDIANNAPOLIS (AP) — Jimmy Connors, scoring repeatedly with powerful two-fisted backhands, overwhelmed Poland's Wjtek Fibak 6-2, 6-4 Monday night to win his second U.S. Clay Court tennis championship and a first prize of $25,000.

Connors, the No. 1 seed from Belleville, Ill., took the lead in the opening game when he broke Fibak's serve and was never seriously challenged after that.

Fibak won only the third and fifth games of the first set. Connors won the sixth game, then broke Fibak again in the sevenh on a series of overhead smashes off lob shots from his struggling opponent.

Fibak, 23, who still is looking for his first major tournament championship, won $12,500 for second place.

ROXBURGH IS IN BUT CEC MISSES

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Doug Roxburgh of Vancouver two-under-par 140 Monday to win one of three spots in local qualifying for the United States Amateur golf championship.

The 24-year-old Roxburgh, a two-time Canadian amateur champion, fired rounds of 68 and 72 over the 6410-yard, par-71 Fircrest Golf Club course.

The other two qualifying spots went to Gavin Levenson of Johannesburg, South Africa and Bill Sander of Seattle.

Levenson, 22, who is scheduled to play in the Canadian Amateur next week in Victoria, had a 73-68—141. Sander, 20, had a morning round of 76 but came back with a five-under-par 66 in the afternoon for the day's low round among the field of 43 for a 142 total.

Jon Hesselwood of Seattle scored the ace and finished fourth at 143.

Ferguson, whose amateur status is being questioned by the B.C. Golf Association, was three under par in his morning round but went six over on the last eight holes to finish with his 74.

Ump's Thumb Decides Duel

Speaking of weird endings . . .

Roy Moretti couldn't win with a one-hit pitching performance while Kubiceks claimed a Senior Amateur Baseball League playoff victory without scoring a run.

It all happened because Greave's Movers ran out of bodies at Lambrick Park on Monday.

The opening game in a best-of-three semi-final was awarded to Kubiceks when a player's ejection left Greave's with only eight players.

Greave's started with 10 players. Their roster hit nine when Ron Arcuri was used as a pinch-hitter in the sixth inning. Then it was down to eight — and the default — when umpire Doug Hudland ejected Rick Mark for arguing a third-strike call.

Moretti, Greave's starting hurler, allowed only one hit in the eight-inning duel. He lost his no-hitter when Gerry Lister beat out an infield hit in the eighth inning.

That One Walk One Too Many

Walks, they say, will hurt you.

There was only one in Monday's Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League playoff at Central Park but it was enough to put Ingraham Hotel down 2-1 in their best-of-five semi-final series with Seaboard Construction.

Seaboard shortstop Brian Grexton coaxed the game's only free pass out of southpaw Mel Nelson in the sixth inning. A sacrifice and Bob Reid's infield hit moved Grexton to third and big Brian then scored the winning run on catcher Tom Robertson's crisp single to provide Seaboard with a 2-1 victory.

Phil Berry, touched for one run in the first when Jack Lundquist and Mike Cox banged out successive doubles with two out, was the winning pitcher.

Berry aided his own cause with a solo homer that tied the game 1-1 in the third.

Teams meet again Wednesday while Royal Oak and Sooke Merchants, deadlocked 1-1, resumed their semi-final argument tonight.

Sidney Hotel upset Seaboard Properties 7-5 at Sanscha Park Monday to grab a 1-0 lead in the Sidney Men's League final. The best-of-five playoff continues Wednesday.

Harvey's Sporting Goods of the Sidney League earned a berth in the B.C. recreational playdowns by defeating Sidney Hotel 10-3 in the deciding game of the Island zone playoff.

Changes Due Tonight

There'll be several changes in the International Drivers' Challenge standings for super-modified and sprint cars after tonight's race at Western Speedway.

That's because Saturday night's winner of the first leg of the five-rac eseries at Skagit Speedway near Mount Vernon, Wash., isn't expected to race tonight. The winner was Larry Arrants of Lake Stevens, Wash., who campaigns almost exclusively at Skagit.

Plenty of top drivers will be on hand, however, seeking a berth in the 75-lap "A" main event. Among them will be Bill Deschamps of Lakeport, Calif., who has never missed an IDC race since the series' inception in 1970. Tuesday will be his 36th start.

Other familiar open-wheeled drivers coming include Bob Cochran of Edmonds, Wash., Don McLeod of Tacoma, John Tharpe of Alderwood Manor, Wash., and Earl Kelly of San Jose, Calif.

1. Larry Arrants, Lake Stevens, Wash., 136; 2. Fred Brownfield, Snohomish, Wash., 130; 3. Bob Johnson, Burlington, Wash., 124; 4. Don McLeod, Tacoma, 110; 5. Bill Deschamps, Lakeport, Calif., 99; 6. Ross Fontes, Bothel, Wash., 7. Butch Fuller, Everett, Wash., 95; 8. Bob Cochran, Edmonds, Wash., 88; 10. Irv Westby, Arlington, Wash., 80.

Swiss Skiers Turning Pro

GENEVA (AP) — Bernhard Russi and Heini Hemmi, Swiss Olympic ski champions, announced Sunday they are turning professional.

Russi, 27, Olympic downhill gold medallist at Sapporo in 1972 and silver medallist at Insbruk this year, told a reporter he has "had enough of hypocrisy."

MAMMOTH TASK FOR ENGLAND

LONDON (AP) — England tackled the mammoth task of scoring 392 runs to win on the final day of play today in the fifth and final test cricket match against the West Indies at the Oval.

Michael Holding, the 22-year-old Jamaican fast bowler, made test history Monday with figures of 33 overs, nine maidens, eight wickets for 92 runs. It was the best test performance against England, at home or away, by a West Indian bowler in history. The previous record was eight for 104 set by spinner Alf Valentine against England at Old Trafford in 1950.

The best single innings performance by a West Indian is the nine for 95 taken by Joe Noreiga against Indian in Trinidad in 1971.

England began the day at 304 for five, chasing a West Indies' first-innings total of 687. Dennis Amiss, the recalled England opener, resumed at 176 and made his double century before he was bowled by Holding for 203.

Alan Knott added 50, and test newcomer Geoff Miller 36 before England was all out 435, leaving them 253 behind.

West Indies captain Clive Lloyd decided not to have England follow on, and put his side in to bat. Openers Gordon Greenidge, 85, and Roy Fredericks, 86, then put on 182 runs without loss in 36 minutes.

Lloyd declared at 6 p.m. and England openers Amiss and Bob Woolmer went out to face Holding and Andy Roberts, chasing a target of 435.

At the close, the England pair had put on 43 without loss, Woolmer on 21 and Amiss on 14.

DAVE STOCKTON
. . . second PGA crown

A Positive Thinker With a Hot Putter

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Dave Stockton predicted three days before the end of the PGA national championship that he would win. Few believed him.

"I'm a positive thinker," said Stockton, a student of psychocybernetics, the science of mind over matter. "I play well in the PGA more often than not."

But even Stockton admitted he was shocked to learn that he led by only one stroke in Monday's final round of the rain-delayed PGA tournament as he strolled down the 18th fairway. His worst fear was a sudden death playoff.

"I really chopped it up on the 13th and 14th holes and I didn't want to go back out there for a playoff."

Stockton, 34, using a three-wood because he had been wild with his driver, put his ball slightly to the right near the rough on No. 18, a 465-yard par four.

He was short of the green by about five feet with a two-iron, the ball on a slight downslope. He chipped to within about 15 feet of the pin.

Then, with the $45,000 first prize on the line, Stockton did what he does most often—he sank the 15-foot putt to give him the title by a single stroke at 281, one over par on the Congressional Country Club course.

In the last two rounds, Stockton needed only 51 putts — 25 on Saturday and 26 on Monday — which he said was about normal for him.

He needed the hot putter, however, because his driver went awry.

Masters champion Ray Floyd and the veteran January tied for second at 282. January had a 72 on the final round, Floyd a 71.

Stockton, winner of the 1970 PGA championship in Tulsa, had rounds of 70, 72, 69 and 70, gained an advantage when three earlier leaders—Charles Coody, Jack Nicklaus and Don January—suffered double bogeys in the final round.

Defending champion Nicklaus, Australian David Graham, John Schlee and rookie Jerry Pate, the U.S. and Canadian Open champion, were another stroke back at 283.

All had a chance to win the PGA, the last of the year's four major international tests.

Stockton parred No. 6 and was still two over, but he birdied No. 7 and No. 8 to go to even par, one stroke behind January. The 46-year-old January double-bogeyed No. 10 and Stockton had the lead.

Nicklaus' failure to mount a late charge deprived him of a major championship for the year and brought from him the admission that 1976 was "a disappointment."

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Canucks will play five exhibition games prior to the start of the National Hockey League season — three here, one in Victoria and the other in Los Angeles.

The Canucks play the Kings in Los Angeles Sept. 25, play them here Oct. 1 and again in Victoria Oct. 2. Toronto Maple Leafs provide the opposition here Sept. 28 and 29.

Hot Streak Ends But Athletics Still Steam

By The Associated Press

Storm clouds seem to hover over the head of American League umpire Bill Kunkel this season.

Kunkel, whose umpiring drew the ire of New York Yankees and Cleveland Indians earlier this season, provoked the usually mild-mannered Billy Williams on Monday night.

Oakland's Williams, steaming after losing a balls-and-strikes argument to Kunkel, was thrown out of a game for the first time in his 17-year major league career during the A's 4-3 loss to Milwaukee Brewers.

"I'm really upset because we were only seven games out and on a winning streak," said Williams. "The umpiring in this league is horse manure.

"I figure I could have been thrown out of a couple of games this year, but I kept quiet because we're fighting for a pennant. Since we are, I think we have the right to expect the umpires to bear down."

In Monday's other American League games, Kansas City Royals beat Cleveland Indians 6-1, New York Yankees downed Texas Rangers 5-1, Baltimore Orioles trimmed Minnesota Twins 8-4 and Boston Red Sox whipped Chicago White Sox 12-5.

In National League games, Atlanta Braves upset Cincinnati Reds 4-3, San Diego Padres outscored St. Louis Cardinals 11-7 and Chicago Cubs whipped Houston Astros 5-3.

Williams, who had fanned twice and grounded out, stepped to the plate in the eighth inning with runners at first and third and two out and the A's clinging to a 3-2 lead.

He squawked over each of the first two strikes.

"I figure I know the strike zone pretty well and that first pitch was high and inside," Williams insisted. "I complained. I have a reputation for not complaining, so...I guess I'm not supposed to.

"The second pitch was on the ground but because I had complained, it was called a strike. I complained again and he ordered me back into the box. But I wasn't ready to get back in because I figured anything Frisella threw anywhere near the plate would be called strike three. I wasn't ready to be called out that way."

But that's the way it was. Kunkel told Frisella to pitch even though Williams was out of the box and strike three it was, an automatic call in such cases.

DALE QUALIFIES

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Victoria's Dale Shaw, Canada's top-ranked women golfer in 1975 but still looking for a major title, fired a six-over-par 78 Monday to qualify easily for the championship in the 76th U.S. women's amateur tournament.

The Glen Meadows member was one of three Canadians to qualify. Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver also made it by scoring an 80 while Ontario's Marlene Streit made it with a 77.

Defending champion Beth Daniel, a 19-year-old university student from South Carolina, won medal honors with a two-under 70, two strokes ahead of 21-year-old Donna Horton of Florida.

Among the other 64 qualifiers was Debbie Massey of Bethlehem, Pa., who won the Canadian title in Prince Albert last week. She made it with a 74.

'Dangerous' Prison Escaper Arrested

A 28-year-old man police have called "extremely dangerous" is expected to be charged in provincial court today with escaping from William Head prison.

Douglas Eric Ostergard was arrested after off-duty city policeman Bruce Halstead spotted a man on the Patricia Bay Highway shortly after noon Monday.

Halstead was driving to Sidney when a car passed him at Elk Lake. He thought he recognized the driver and jotted down a description of the car and its licence.

He stopped at the nearest phone and called the information ahead to Sidney RCMP, who sent out two cars and stopped a vehicle between Macdonald Park Road and Beacon.

Police said the lone occupant gave another name than Ostergard and there was no difficulty in making an arrest.

William Head officials said Ostergard was sentenced Dec. 19, 1973, to seven years for trafficking in heroin in the Nanaimo area. He was transferred to William Head last Jan. 28 and was one of two men reported as escaping March 20. The other was picked up four days later.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A nominal one-day jail term, which actually means no time at all, "is not my idea of a suitable penalty in ordinary circumstances by any means" for a case where a policeman is assaulted, Judge William Ostler said Monday in Victoria provincial court.

But he allowed a one-day sentence for Murray Frederick Hildebrandt, 22, of 319 St. Lawrence, mainly because prosecutor Robert Mulligan suggested it would be sufficient after Hildebrandt spent 22 extra days in custody in error.

Hildebrandt, who was originally charged with assaulting a peace officer, pleaded guilty to a charge of common assault in an incident early April 25.

A Victoria policeman called to investigate a domestic dispute learned Hildebrandt was in the house and knew there was a parole-suspension warrant in existence for him. Hildebrandt ran, said Mulligan, but was caught after a pursuit "of some distance."

As the pursuit ended, Hildebrandt hit the policeman, who was not hurt. Defence lawyer Derek Brindle said his client raised one arm with intent to strike and the officer ran into it.

Hildebrandt pleaded not guilty April 26 to the original charge and Monday was set as the trial date. His parole revocation form was endorsed in court April 26 and Monday was marked down as his release day.

But, said Mulligan, Hildebrandt should have been released June 18 because of "good time." Once June 18 arrived, he was sent to another detention centre because of the release-day mistake. The error was not corrected and Hildebrandt was not freed on bail until July 9.

Own-recognizance bail of $1,500 was approved by Ostler for Robert Bruce McNaughton, 20, of 821 Princess, who was charged with possession of marijuana Saturday in Victoria for trafficking.

Further hearing of the case was remanded one week at the request of legal aid duty counsel Malcolm McMicken. Prosecutor Jack Kenny said the case involved 25 exhibits. Another person facing the same charge with McNaughton is in hospital with a bleeding ulcer.

John Hore, 29, of 1245 Fort, chose trial by county court judge on a Victoria charge of an Aug. 7 break-in and theft at Imperial Building Materials, 2955 Douglas, and Ostler set the preliminary hearing for Oct. 19.

That was the first available date open to both the prosecution and defence. Hore is in custody after Ostler refused bail in a hearing Aug. 9 which included an order prohibiting publication or broadcast of hearing details.

Ernest Frank Wythe, 18, of 2546 Quadra, pleaded guilty to a five-count Victoria charge of writing five worthless cheques July 2-8 to obtain a total of $100 cash at a department store and was sentenced by Ostler to one month in jail.

The term will run at the same time as a sentence of five months definite and six months indeterminate imposed Aug. 6 for a break-in and theft.

In the court section of Judge Harold Alder, higher-court trial was ordered for David James Fleming, 25, of 1715 Bay, and Roy Charles Miller, 27, of 215 Oswego, following a preliminary hearing of a joint charge of trafficking in marijuana March 26 in Victoria.

In traffic court, Patrick Michael Murray, 19, of 3879 Carey, was found guilty by Judge Blake Allan after a trial on a Victoria charge of impaired driving Nov. 13, 1975, and was fined $500.

Two persons pleaded guilty to separate charges of driving with a blood-alcohol reading above .08 per cent. They were David James Christopher Cox, 19, of 1622 Richardson, stopped Aug. 8 in Victoria, fined $250 and ordered to do 50 hours of community work, and Dennis Walter Cecil Head, 24, of 1013 Sluggett, stopped April 24 in Oak Bay and fined $500.

MIDWAY SEIZED FOR TAXES

STETTLER, Alta. (CP) — Officials of Sonny Meyers Amusements Ltd. were consulting with American lawyers Monday following a seizure of documents from the midway office here Friday morning.

The federal income tax department has ordered the midway to remain in this central Alberta community until it pays $58,000 in back taxes stemming from its 1974 operations in Canada.

An RCMP spokesman said Monday that midway workers dismantled the rides Sunday night but have made no move to vacate the grounds.

The spokesman said RCMP surveillance of the fairgrounds will continue.

However, Kim Farmer, chief of verifications and collections with the district tax office, said in an interview earlier Monday that he hoped the company would make suitable arrangements for payment of the defaulted taxes.

The Stettler County Fair was the last stop in Canada for the St. Joseph, Mo., midway.

Federal income tax officials, aided by the Red Deer deputy sheriff and RCMP, seized financial documents and $10,000 in cash. All rides, equipment and vehicles were impounded.

Stettler lawyer Helmut Landman, who acted as legal adviser for the midway until Saturday, said the firm told him that American lawyers would be taking over the case. he confirmed that the money owing was about $58,000.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Possibly the greatest thrill that can come to a bridge player is experienced when he fulfills a slam contract by brilliant play. Such was the case in today's deal, which came up in a team-of-four match.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 NT	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
5 NT	Pass	6 ◇	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♡.

It is my belief that most players, had they been sitting South, would have gone down at the spade slam. After winning the opening heart lead, they would have led a spade to dummy's king. And once they did that, the contract would be doomed to defeat, since the loss of two trump tricks to West would now become unavoidable.

Our South declarer, upon winning the opening lead with the heart queen, promptly led a club to dummy's ace, after which he ruffed a club. Now came a trump to the board's king, and receipt of the news that West had been dealt the four outstanding trumps.

Declarer next led another club and ruffed it. He then cashed the king of hearts. Now came the ace of hearts—and declarer ruffed the ace in dummy!

The board's remaining club was then led, South trumping again as both opponents followed suit. The ace and king of diamonds were cashed next. Up to this point ten tricks had been played, and South had won all of them. His three remaining cards were the A-J of trumps and the three of diamonds.

When, to trick eleven, South led his remaining diamond, West was forced to trump it. He was then compelled to lead away from his Q-10 of trumps up to South's A-J, enabling declarer to win the last two tricks via an end play.

On the replay, the new South declarer also reached six-spade contract, with West again leading the heart jack. To trick two declarer led a trump to dummy's king. Then came the club ace, followed by the ruffing of a second club lead. The king of hearts was cashed next, after which the ace of hearts was ruffed.

Another club was now trumped. Then came three diamond leads, East winning the third lead. East returned a diamond, South ruffed with the seven, and West overruffed with the nine, for the setting trick. He then had to lead a trump from his remaining Q-10 into South's A-J.

ROLLING STONE

By RICH WISEMAN

Jackson Browne travelled to the middle of the Arizona desert recently to do a benefit concert. The show, with accompanist David Lindley, drew 3,000 fans and raised $14,000 for Arcosanti, an experimental community designed by ecology-conscious architect Paolo Soleri and being built by his Cosanti Foundation 70 miles north of Phoenix.

Having performed some 20 benefits over the last two years for the Sierra Club, the Hopi Indians and California Senate candidate Tom Hayden, among others, Browne was a natural choice.

"I think performers live a privileged existence," he told us. "You don't have to care about anybody but yourself to be an entertainer. But for me, people like . . . Paolo are inspiring my life, doing the things they think need to be done to better our lot."

At the benefit, held right on the Arcosanti site in the open air, Browne performed four songs off his soon-to-be-released album, The Pretender — including the masterful title. In the song, Browne comments on a society too caught up with "the struggle for the legal tender" to relize that "true love could have been a contender."

BEST QUOTE at the Olympics: Mick Jagger, asked by ABC sports reporter, Jim Campley whether any of the Olympic events he'd witnessed were as physically exhausting as his performances, said: "Oh, all of them. Musicians don't really train, after all. Most of them sit around scratching their beards, getting stoned" . . . Mick, who attended the games with wife Bianca, his father and manager Peter Rudge, finagled front-row press seats at a fencing event one day. When security officials asked him to move to the VIP box Mick was heard to protest, "I have problems with me vision." He got to stay.

Bob Dylan has changed his mind about his appearance with the Rolling Thunder Revue on NBC. The show will go on — September 14, late night — but Dylan has dropped the footage shot by the crew of The Midnight Special and replaced it with a videotape of a Colorado concert, done by TVTV, which first gained notice for its coverage of the Democratic Convention in Chicago in '68.

On insider (not frm TVTV) told us Dylan thought the Midnight crew's work "looked like every other Midnight Special." Dylan called TVTV and hired them to tape the May 23 concert at Hughes Stadium in Ft. Collins. It rained on the Rolling Thunder that day, and the result is Hard Rain, a documentary with so many close-ups of the Revue that "you kind of feel you're right there on stage."

Dylan was apparently taken by the weather. For the first, and only, time on the tour, he sang A Hard Rain's a Gonna Fall. He also performed a blistering Idiot Wind and sang Blowing in the Wind with Joan Baez. NBC executives reportedly "freaked out" when they saw the show, but, our source says, they'll air it.

Hollywood-Style Indians Sent Home

TORONTO (CP) — A group of eight Huron Indians from Quebec were told to go home after their first performance at the Ontario Science Centre at the weekend because their version of Indians lacked realism, a centre spokesman said.

"Their performance of Indian rituals resembled a Hollywood version of Indians and wasn't realistic," Janet Hume said in an interview.

She said the Indians wore vinyl costumes, eye make-up and dyed yellow-and-orange feathers.

The group was scheduled to perform all week with 20 Indians from Quebec, Ontario and the Maritimes in a daily program depicting Indian life and their crafts.

The Horons, from a village eight miles outside Quebec City, were paid $200 for their half-hour performance and were to get $1,600 plus expenses for the entire week.

PORT MORESBY, Papua, New Guinea — Teachers in some remote areas of Papua New Guinea are arriving at their schools too drunk to teach, an education superintendent said today.

Alan Isolamo, a provincial education superintendent, appealed to teachers to recognize their responsibilities. He said drunkenness among teachers in outlying areas was far too common.

WICHITA, Kan. — Yvonne Holt stepped out of her bathtub, heard a funny noise and saw a nine-foot python curled up in the toilet bowl.

"She let out the damnedest scream," said her husband Jerome.

The snake is named Killer and is owned by a neighborhood boy. Killer escaped last week when it was placed in the owner's bathroom while its cage was being cleaned. The non-poisonous native of Southeast Asia apparently made its way through the sewer to the Holt's bathroom one block away.

NEW YORK — Richard Butler, 20-year-old Ottawa taxi driver, returned to New York on Monday, completing an 8,800-mile bicentennial run around the United States, an achievement he called one of the greatest experiences of his life.

"It was an incredible run," said Butler in a brief interview after he and 30 United States youths trotted up to a civic welcoming ceremony at Federal House in downtown New York City to mark the end of their 52-day jog around the country.

DUBROVNIK — Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau met his Yugoslav counterpart, Dzemal Bijedic, for talks in this Adriatic resort Monday, official sources said.

The two prime ministers discussed international issues and bilateral ties, the sources said.

SKIER WEDS

VANCOUVER (UPI) — Austrian Tony Sailer, former world champion skier and Olympic gold medalist, was secretly married to a West German blonde in Vancouver two weeks ago, friends disclosed Monday.

They said Sailer and his bride, the former Gaby Feick of Munich, are now in Kitzbuhel, Austria, where Sailer has a home.

Notice of Public Hearing

Ottawa, August 6, 1976.

ISSUE NO. 1
OTTAWA, ONTARIO
NOVEMBER 16, 1976, 9:00 A.M.

The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission will hold a Public Hearing on November 16, 1976 at the Government Conference Centre, 2 Rideau Street, Ottawa, Ontario to consider the following matter;

PROPOSED REGULATIONS RESPECTING BROADCASTING LICENCE FEES

The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission proposes to enact regulations respecting broadcasting licence fees in accordance with the following schedule:

SCHEDULE
Short Title

1. The Regulations may be cited as the Broadcasting Licence Fee Regulations.

Interpretation

2. In these Regulations,
"associated corporation" has the same meaning as defined in s. 256 of the Income Tax Act. R.S.C. 1952 C.148 as amended by S.C. 1970-71-72 C.63.
"fee revenue" means the total revenue derived from the licensed activity of a broadcasting undertaking whether earned by the licensee of a broadcasting undertaking or by an associated corporation, but does not include revenue from another broadcasting undertaking whose revenue is subject of assessment;
"return year" means the period commencing September 1 in any year and terminating August 31 of the next following year;

Application

3. These Regulations apply to all broadcasting undertakings other than
(a) rebroadcasting transmitting stations insofar as they carry the same programming as the originating station;
(b) student carrier current broadcasting undertakings; and
(c) broadcasting undertakings carried on by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Licence Fees

4. An applicant for a licence to carry on a broadcasting undertaking for which a licence has not previously been issued shall pay to the Commission a fee of $25, which fee is not returnable but will, if his application is approved, be the licence fee until the broadcasting undertaking commences broadcasting operations.

5.(1) Subject to subsections (2) to (4), every licensee shall pay to the Commission a licence fee based upon the fee revenue of the return year or any portion of the return year during which he was licensed, the amount of which shall be calculated as follows:
(a) for Radio Broadcasting Undertakings
(i) where the fee revenue in the return year is $300,000 or less . . . $25,
(ii) where the fee revenue in the return year is greater than $300,000 . . . $25 plus 1½% of the amount by which the fee revenue exceeds $300,000.
(b) for Television Broadcasting Undertakings
(i) where the fee revenue in the return year is $1,000,000 or less . . . $25,
(ii) where the fee revenue in the return year is greater than $1,000,000 . . . $25 plus 1½% of the amount by which the fee revenue exceeds $1,000,000.
(c) for Broadcasting Receiving Undertakings
(i) where the fee revenue in the return year is $75,000 or less . . . $25,
(ii) where the fee revenue in the return year is greater than $75,000 . . . $25 plus 1½% of the amount by which the fee revenue exceeds $75,000.

(2) Where a licensee operates both an AM and an FM Broadcasting Undertaking in all or any part of the same market, the calculation of the licence fee will be upon the combined fee revenue of both undertakings.

(3) Subsection (2) is equally applicable to a situation in which one of the undertakings is operated as an associated corporation.

(4) Where a broadcasting undertaking consists of an originating station with one or more rebroadcasting transmitting stations carrying the same programming as the originating station, the calculation of the licence fee will be upon the combined fee revenue of the entire undertaking

6. Where a licensee fails to remit his licence fee payment on or before the 30th day of November of the next return year, an interest payment of 1½% per month on any outstanding balance shall also be due and owing.

The Commission invites comments from all interested parties on the proposed amendments to the Broadcasting Licence Fee Regulations. Submissions must be filed by registered mail or personal delivery with the Secretary General of the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, 100 Metcalfe Street, Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0N2 on or before October 15, 1976.

Copies of the Notice of Public Hearing including background material are available at the CRTC office in Ottawa, at the regional offices of the CRTC in Montreal, Que. and Victoria, B.C.

ANYONE GOT A MATCH?

WINNIPEG — Sharing The Sun 76, a conference on solar energy; got off to a black start Monday, when a guest speaker was reduced to reading his notes by match light after the lights went out.

The local energy crisis developed after Dr. E. J. Casey asked for the main convention hall lights to be dimmed for a slide presentation.

Not until all the lights were turned off was it realized that the carbon arc lamps take 15 minutes to warm up before they come back on.

Dr. Casey read his text by lighting matches until a delegate resourcefully produced a small flashlight.

Planning Set to Begin On Helmcken Hospital

Regional representatives met Health Minister Bob McClelland today to get planning for a new 250-bed general hospital on Helmcken Road near the Trans-Canada Highway under way.

It is the first development in two months on what is expected to be at least a $40 million project taking two years to plan and at least another two years to build.

The 34-acre Helmcken site was initially the eighth of nine choices considered by the regional Hospital and Health Planning Commission, which favored a 25-acre property at Douglas and McKenzie.

But after months of wrangling with the provincial government, a majority of commission members concluded the province would not budge on its opposition to the ore expensive site and reluctantly agreed to the Helmcken location.

The McKenzie-Douglas site would have cost $2.5 million while the larger Helmcken site is costing $515,0000.

John Clark, director of regional hospital planning, said he understood today's meeting was to get planning procedures for the new hospital started.

Earlier this year, McClelland said if the region accepted the Helmcken site, he would see the necessary approvals from government were enacted "the next day."

BOTTLE THROWER CHANGES TO BULLETS

CHICAGO (AP) — A 13-year-old boy who neighbors say made a habit of throwing bottles at passers-by has been charged with murdering a man who objected to being a target.

Police said the boy threw some bottles at Leroy Barry, 33, as Barry walked by the boy's South Side home.

Barry went to the boy's third-floor porch to stop him and got into a scuffle with the boy's father, Odell Burns, 67.

East Coast Oil Bidding Goes Ahead

NEW YORK (UPI) — The U.S. government says drilling the ocean floor off the mid-Atlantic coast could tap billions of dollars worth of new energy resources. Coastal communities fear it could ruin the environment.

As of early today, the government had the upper hand — court permission for the interior department to sell oil and natural gas exploration leases for more than 876,000 acres of submerged land off the coast.

The sale's opponents — New York State, Long Island's Nassau and Suffolk counties and the National Resources Defence Council — said they would appeal on an emergency basis to the supreme court before interior departing bids today from more than 60 oil and gas companies.

The area in the continental shelf — 876,750 acres — is said to contain 400 million to 1.4 billion barrels of oil worth from $5 billion to $17 billion and 2.6 trillion to 9.4 trillion cubic feet of natural gas worth $4 billion to $14 billion.

On Monday, a three-judge panel of the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals threw out a lower court injunction against the sale.

FOUNTAIN DRY?

LONDON (Reuter) — London's most famous fountains, at Trafalgar Square, may be turned off under the government's emergency water regulations, passed 10 days ago.

Applications to the government for powers to combat the worst drought for 250 years have been drafted by the country's 10 water authorities.

A department of the environment spokesman said the restrictions could be in force within three days. The Trafalgar fountains use nearly 100,000 gallons in a recycling system.

"The only point in turning them off would be as a gesture to the public, to encourage them" the spokesman said.

Several authorities already have introduced water rationing. In Wales, more than one million domestic consumers have been without water for 12 hours each night for more than a week.

Jersey introduced rationing Monday because the channel island's vacationers are helping drain the reservoirs by 22 million gallons a day.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Mayor Requests Erosion Probe

Central Saanich Mayor Jean Butler said today she has asked two aldermen to study the threat posed by rapid erosion south of Island View Beach and report back to council.

Concern over the rate of erosion locally and its threat to property and life was raised in a technical study published last week by Dr. Harold Foster, geologist at the University of Victoria.

Mayor Butler, who said she believes Foster to be talking about homes on Welch Road, has asked aldermen Ray Lamont and Percy Lazarz, chairmen respectively of council's subdivision and zoning and public works committees, to get Foster's report and examine the local situation.

Foster said there are five stretches of shoreline in the Capital district suffering erosion at a rate greater than a foot a year and the worst of them is at Cowichan Head in the southeast corner of Central Saanich.

The bluffs there are being eaten away by wind, waves and storms at the rate of five or six feet a year, he said, and houses near the edge could end up in the sea within 10 to 20 years.

Foster said it might be possible to halt the erosion there at immense expense but even if it were practical it would mean the end to Island View Beach, which is maintained by the eroding material.

57 'Heritage' Homes Studied

Oak Bay's heritage advisory committee will study a report on 57 houses of heritage significance.

But committee chairman Ald. Doug McLelland emphasized it would be a mistake to assume that all the houses will be designated.

"It's an information document, certainly not a blueprint for designation.

The report, prepared by University of Victoria art historian Martin Segger, is the result of six months study.

"The report is fairly new. The committee, I don't believe, has had a chance to thoroughly study the whole report so we will be studying the report as a whole committee."

The 57 houses were pared with an original 200. Excellence of architecture, according to Segger, was the prime factor in determining the final list.

McLelland declined to name the 57 houses mentioned in the report but confirmed that Bellevue Court at Beresford and Newport is one. That property was included in a redevelopment area set last month by council to allow construction of a 23-unit condominium building.

How Long Can Blip Trip Last?

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

It used to be DING, DING — FLASH — DINGITY-DING-DING, but now there is just a sedate blip, blip, bzzz.

The penny arcade pinball machine, a popular pastime since its invention in Chicago in 1930, has given way to the eminently more respectable electronic video game.

But pinball wizards shouldn't despair. The flashy electronic gadgets may be just that — a flash in the pan.

That's the feeling of distributor Brian Hill of Christie-Hill Enterprises Ltd., 727 Johnson, who says the popularity of electronic games — only a few years old — is already waning.

But not so, says R. B. Alexander of the Ryan vending company. He is trying to get more electronic machines imported from the U.S. manufacturers.

Hill feels the industry is destroying itself by offering new more sophisticated games almost daily. And as they get more expensive, each game has to stay popular longer to show a profit.

Alexander, however, said a good machine in a good location pays for itself quickly, and after patrons tire of it, it can be moved to another location.

"Sure I've got some of the older models sitting around, but they paid for themselves," he said. And they can be auctioned off to a foreign purchaser for a run in another country.

The equipment basically consist of a computer-like console, run by electronic circuitry which flashes various images on a video screen.

The screen serves as a sort of field of play, and depending on the set-up, players are pitted against the machine of another player — with the machine and its little box collecting quarters the ultimate winner.

On a few games, players who are really good can win free games like pinball. When that happens, the games are moved to another location where quarters will be fed in regularly again.

But most machines have what industry insiders call an "ace in the hole".

This is the ace in the hole — the shot that goes to the machine no matter how good the players are. Hill said the longest a tennis game is programmed to run is about three minutes, regardless of the expertise of the players.

So plunk another quarter in fellas, the game's unbeatable.

It is the lack of control Hill feels will bring about the demise of the electronic video games — at least in Canada.

For some reason, he says, the Americans seem less concerned with this factor.

At the University of Miami, one machine was being fed 3,000 quarters a week. It became a college cult.

But Canadians seem to grow tired of them more quickly and a distributor can get burned if someone comes along with a better machine and the outlet, such as a beer parlor, wants the new one, Hill said.

"A Canadian's make-up is different, perhaps it's ego," Hill speculates. "If he can't control what's going on, he doesn't want to get involved.

"A common feeling today is that machines control so much of our lives, we don't want them controlling our leisure time, too."

Hill said that's why pool, shuffleboard and even pinball are still popular and will continue to be — the player has control over the time and action of the game.

In the electronic games, he goes as fast as the machine dictates.

Electronic video games were originally designed as executives' playthings Hill said. And there's no doubt they found their way into places where pinball machines would never tread — cocktail lounges, fancy hotels, and even the B.C. Ferries and the Princess Marguerite.

But they turned out to be more popular with young people than with adults, and if they continue to be successful, it will be because of the continuing search by today's youth for more sophisticated gadgetry for entertainment.

Swine Vaccine Ordered

The B.C. health department has ordered two types of swine vaccine from the federal government for a fall vaccination program, Health Minister Bob McClelland said today.

The minister said his department has ordered vaccine for protection against both swine flu and Victoria flu.

The province has still not been told how much of the flu vaccine being imported by Ottawa will be allocated to B.C. nor has a definite date been given for arrival of the vaccine.

One of the vaccines, which provides protection against both types of flu, will be offered as soon as it arrives to people of all ages who have chronic illnesses which could be worsened by a flu attack.

Any surplus of this vaccine will be offered to people over 65 years of age.

The second vaccine, which protects only against swine flu, will be used for a province-wide mass immunization program for healthy people if there is an outbreak of swine flue reported anywhere in the world.

McClelland said there have been no reported cases of swine flu since the outbreak in the U.S. last spring.

The dual vaccine will be given by public health staff and community clinics and by nursing staff where recipients are living in an extended care facility. Times and location for public clinics will be announced as soon as it is known when the vacine will be available.

Man's Body Recovered

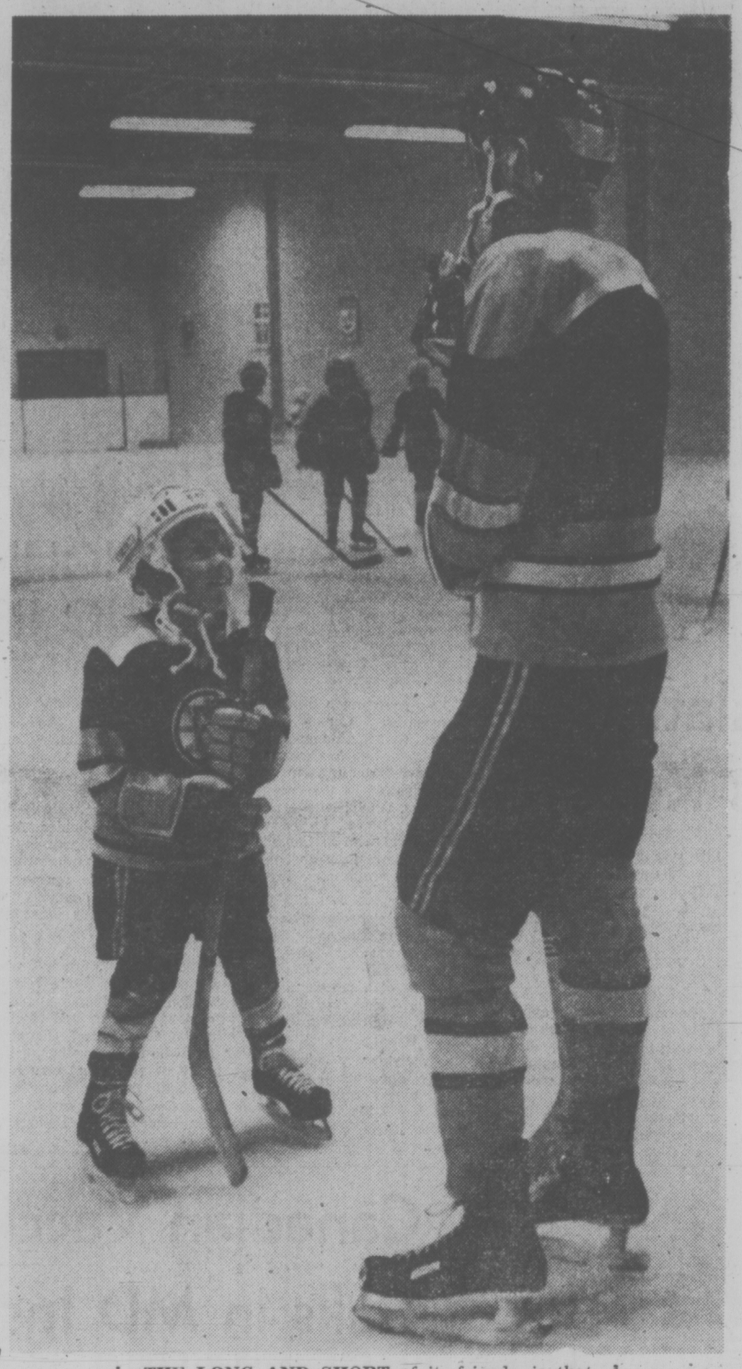
Roderick Finlayson, 32, disappeared Aug. 4 at the south end of the lake. His empty boat was found drifting in the area.

RCMP said an inquiry will likely be held.



THE LONG AND SHORT of it, friends, is that summer (what there was of it) appears to be long gone. Sporting goods stores are already reporting a big run on hockey equipment sales and hockey schools, a sure harbinger of chilly days, are in full swing. Spring Start Seen On Water Scheme

The executive director of the Capital Region Board said today that construction on a trunk water system to supply the Saanich Peninsula might start next spring and cost $2 to $3 million.

While ratepayers in the municipalities of Central Saanich, Sidney and North Saanich will pay for it, Dennis Young said he understands there will be some financial help from both federal and provincial governments.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis announced Monday that the regional board will take on the role of water supply agency on the drought-plagued peninsula, with the three municipalities in future handling distribution within their own boundaries.

The decision comes as a first step in reorganizing what has been a fragmented water supply and distribution situation generating bickering for years.

Curtis' decision, which came after meetings with water boards, councils, the region and the Greater Victoria water district, reflects the choice of the majority.

Under it water for the peninsula, which has come from Elk Lake, small reservoirs and wells, will eventually be supplied by the Greater Victoria Water District from the Sooke watershed.

The water district will sell in bulk to the regional board, which will build a trunk system from the Central Saanich border to Sidney and North Saanich.

Each of the three municipalities will tap the regional main lines to supply their own distribution systems.

Young said meetings will have to settle when work will start, how the trunk system will be developed and how customers will pay for it.

One way would be to have the capital cost of the regional trunk system financed through property taxes while the cost of the water and maintaining the system might be collected through a utility charge, he said.

Jim Campbell, regional board chairman, said Curtis' decision is "a strong and positive stand within which the three municipalities can solve their water problems."

The regional board's position has simply been a readiness to help in any way it can and if there are future delays in developing the integrated supply system, they can't be laid at the door of region or province, he said.

Campbell said he is in no doubt Curtis' decision was the right thing to do and it now remains for Central and North Saanich and Sidney to reach accord on implementation.

Visitors' Coins Sold

The Victoria Visitors' Information Centre has sold all its 50,000 tourist dollars.

"We are sold out," manager Don Nixon said today. "All merchants except a few stores have accepted as tender the tourist dollar."

He said the information centre still has a few silver coins selling at $16 and gold coins at $240, but these are expected to go before the end of September.

Nixon said the few stores refusing to accept the coins as tender are missing out on sales.

"The banks honor the dollars," he said. "There is no problem in getting your money back."

The scheme was launched by the centre to raise funds for tourists promotion.

The cost of minting the coins and promoting the scheme is estimated at 45 cents a coin, but are sold by the centre for $1 each.

Saanich Townhouse Project Rejected

An Alberta development company's proposal to build 85 townhouses and duplexes on 9.5 acres in the north Quadra area of Lucas and Morris was unanimously rejected Monday by Saanich council.

The bid by Hallward Business Enterprises Ltd. was not on council's agenda and some aldermen asked why.

Although aldermen had not been informed the proposal was to be presented, the developers' representatives attended and displayed a model of the project.

Ald. Joe Bourque said he favored "that sort of a mix in a community" but felt the proposal was premature.

"How does this get here when we haven't made decisions on the density for that area?" he asked.

Ald. Sandy Noel said the area was much more suited to single-family development and reminded council the Ward and Associates' study commissioned by Saanich to guide council in community planning has recommended such a development for the southern part of the municipality.

WOOTTEN
. . . "unimaginative" proposal

Ald. David Paterson, in opposing the project, said a single-family subdivision bid for an adjacent property had been rejected at a recent public hearing because of the pressure it would have put on roads and services

"It's the first time I've seen it," Paterson added, "I'd want to review the copy of the land-use contract (before taking any action)."

Ald. Roy Wootten said, "It's the same old colors and the same old outside treatments . . . not the type of development we want in the area."

"Montrose Park" would have been an Assisted Home Ownership Plan development and Wootten was told this limited the scope which could be used to provide esthetics.

It was noted that although a recreation centre was placed in the centre of the project, according to the model, the developers did not intend to build it, except at the expense of the residents.

Bourque warned that, while the community plan for that area still has to be completed dealing with such proposals "in isolation" is premature.

Heritage Deadline Sept. 9

City council must decide before Sept. 9 whether to contest an application in B.C. Supreme Court to quash its heritage building bylaw.

Owners of two Fairfield properties served notice Monday they are taking the application to court, citing 11 grounds why the bylaw should be quashed, or why they should be exempted from it to allow re-development as a 46-unit condominium.

The Heritage Protection Bylaw was applied two months ago to buildings at 1040 and 1042 Linden, owned by Krieger-Stricker Ltd., Centurian Holdings, Pacific Shore Estates and Desmond W. Dennis, and to Hampton Court Apartments, 159 Cook owned by E. J. Murphy Ltd.

On the following day, Sept. 10, the city will again be in Supreme Court to argue its case in refusing to grant a trade licence to the Gazebo Garden Cafe, Belleville Street, after the land was rezoned.

Partix Properties Ltd., lessee, takes the position that the intention of operating a cafe remained and the building still contained restaurant equipment, even though it was closed from the summer of 1972 and remained closed to this year while there was litigation with the landlord.

In other city business, council's development committee decided this morning to bill Victoria Flying Services Ltd., $441.22 a month for three months rent arrears and a portion of 1976 taxes.

Ald. Bob Wright told the committee "I think we should take a strong stand with this particular company."

He urged action to clear up the outstanding debt which was partly due to misunderstanding at city hall.

City manager Jim Bramley said the company had been paying on the basis of quarterly billings. The city earlier admitted it had made a mistake in the rental charged to the company operating from a float in the Inner Harbor.

Land Commissioner K. R. Wilkins said the water lot was appraised at $4,878.75 which would provide for monthly rental of $441.22 including a 10 per cent administrative charge. But the amount of $1,215.24 in taxes is also owed.

Trial Set For Woman In Fatality

Jenny Grans, 29, of Burnaby, was committed Monday for higher court trial on two charges of criminal negligence arising from a two-car accident March 26 which took the life of Rick Jones, 19, of Victoria.

Jones, a quarterback with Simon Fraser University Clansmen, died in hospital April 2.

He formerly played with Oak Bay Farmer Construction in the Vancouver Island Juvenile Football League, and was a standout basketball player with Mount Douglas high school from which he graduated in 1974.

Raw Milk Okay by Saanich

Saanich council won't go along with Tory leader Scott Wallace's campaign to ban the sale of raw milk.

Aldermen Mary Casilio and Roy Wootten said Monday they drank raw milk.

Wootten said, "I think people should have freedom of choice."

Ald. Fred Severson quipped he could see nothing wrong with raw milk "when I see how healthy Ald. Casilio looks" but suggested people should be aware of potential hazards of raw milk as outlined by Scott Wallace (a medical doctor) and regional health officer Dr. A. S. Arneil.

Severson agreed with the rest of council, however, to take no action and Casilio said "Some doctors recommend raw milk."

Provide Water Access, Council Tells Builder

The Victoria businessmen planning a 260-unit apartment project on the Gorge will be asked by Saanich to donate more waterway access.

Saanich aldermen decided unanimously Monday against passing the final reading of a land-use contract for the project until they have discussed waterfront access with the developers.

The project is planned on the San Sebastian Motel and Victoria Motor Court properties and will consist of six four-storey buildings with an average distance of 100 feet between them to allow passers-by view of the waterways.

The developers, who call themselves 76 Developments, have agreed to donate 40 feet along the waterfront between the park and the peninsula (Aran Point) on the property but only a one-foot strip along the rest of the waterfront.

Ald. Sandy Noel was the first to express concern that the one-foot strip was not enough and would block a promenade being built there, similar to other walks developed in the Gorge area.

Municipal planner Gil Laurenson said because of the nature of the bank a promenade was a "physical impossibility".

"It would have to be back at least 50 feet. You'd be 30 feet into the building. It would mean total replanning."

Ald. Maurice Johnson warned that in the future council would be asked to account for why no provision for access had been included in the land-use contract.

Noel suggested council try and get the developers to allow for a six-foot promenade in the future.

Mayor Ed Lum said no support could be expected from the city of Victoria on Saanich's hopes that the Capital Improvement District-supported Gorge beautification project would be completed in simlar fashion in the Victoria portion of the Gorge.

"In the Victoria part of the Gorge they plan meandering walkways in the upper areas," Lum said.

Municipal engineer Cliff Warren said the one-foot strip was designed to provide an "anchor for the (sea) wall."

"It probably would have been preferable to have a wider strip."

Mounties on Guard Against Hollywood Approach

OTTAWA (UPI) — Producer-Director Jack Webb of Dragnet fame will have to present "just the facts" if he wants to get co-operation for a television series about the RCMP.

An RCMP liaison officer Monday said that after two years of talks between the force and NBC producers in Hollywood, the Mounties are still waiting to hear whether their modern force will be portrayed in a television series.

The force, which today uses equipment and techniques similar to those of any modern large police group, is leery of Hollywood's past propensity to depict RCMP as touring icy wastelands with dogsleds.

Underlying this fear, the government's justice publication "Liaison" notes, "Hollywood is soon to have another go at dramatizing the activities of Canada's red-coated police, according to superintendant John Bentham, RCMP liaison officer in Ottawa.

"Cautious about the traditional Nelson Eddy approach to the force, Bentham is insisting that the image be contemporary and that "everything is depicted accurately."

Insp. John Poirier Monday said "The ball's in their park at the moment. The NBC people have rejected one pilot script and are now apparently working on another."

He said "If the idea for the series is accepted by the NBC brass, the series would use recent actual RCMP cases with the filming done entirely in Canada using Canadian actors.

"We have met several times with producer and director Jack Webb, as well as his writers, and we made our point clear they could use and have access to our cases on condition the scripts and the material used in the scripts was kept factual."

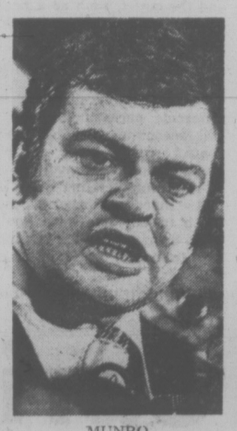
He said the series would show the modern force in action taking in all the aspects of how we operate as Canada's national police force."

Poirier added that a two-hour pilot film would have to be shot and then rated by an impartial and random audience in California "to determine whether the finished product might be a viable commercial product for large-scale viewer consumption."

He said "We're prepared to allow them to look into our past cases, and we'll be glad to assist them.

"From what we can gather, they want to film in Canada using Canadian cities and countryside as background. For instance, we've heard they would like to shoot footage between Vancouver and Winnipeg."

Keep It Peaceful —Munro to CLC



MUNRO

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro said Monday he hopes organized labor's Oct. 14 day of protest against the federal anti-inflation program is pulled off peacefully and legally.

"It is my hope that it will be a day of protest only, which can be accomplished with no absences from work and no breaches of collective agreements whatsoever," Munro said in an interview.

A day of illegal work stoppages would do more harm than good to the labor movement, he said.

In a speech to a convention of labor mediators, Munro said that Canadian Labor Congress president Joe Morris has avoided using the word strike in reference to the day of protest.

"Although I personally do not agree with the need for a protest, I acknowledge such a demonstration as a form of dissent which is entirely in keeping with the democratic process," he said in his speech to the Association of Labor Mediation Agencies.

"There is a major distinction between a strike and a day of protest," the labor minister said in a later interview.

He said that while Morris has referred to a day of protest, other labor leaders are talking about a strike on Oct. 14.

"A general strike is anti-democratic and the labor movement is going to have to live with the consequences" if that is what happens on Oct. 14.

"As a political instrument, it is doomed to failure," Munro said in the interview.

A democratically-elected government would lose credibility if it caved in to the demands of a special interest group.

The CLC says the majority Liberal government already has damaged its credibility by imposing the anti-inflation program of selective wage and price controls. The Liberals campaigned against controls in the 1974 general election campaign.

Morris said Saturday that with the introduction of controls, "the whole question of wage settlements has become highly politicized and the national political forum has become the arena in which the contest is to be resolved."

In a speech to the Certified General Accountants Association of Canada, Morris said the labor movement's immediate objective is to force the withdrawal of the anti-inflation program.

Morris also said that in recent weeks several companies have given wide publicity to the fact they are considering new plant locations in the United States to avoid the anti-inflation board and its regulations.

The CLC president said: "This is really a strike of capital, which is no more than labor is contemplating."

GOLD MEDAL EFFORT JUST TO BREATH

MONTREAL (CP) — Despite tougher anti-pollution measures, concentrations of toxic sulphur dioxide gas in east-end Montreal exceeded acceptable levels by as much as 300 per cent last year, a provincial opposition spokesman charged Monday.

"The air in east Montreal is so polluted that on certain days breathing is an achievement worthy of an Olympic medal," Marcel Leger of the opposition Parti Quebecois told a news conference.

He said that although the air purification department of the Montreal Urban Community has established 0.02 parts per million of sulphur dioxide as the acceptable annual average, monitoring stations near refineries in the east end of the city had recorded readings up to three times as high.

Leger blamed the situation on the "irresponsibility" of Quebec Environment Minister Victor Goldbloom, adding that pollution readings had to be obtained from the refineries themselves because the environment department stopped publishing figures two years ago.

Profit Cutting Prices

TORONTO (CP) — General Foods Ltd. of Toronto, one of the largest food-manufacturing companies in Canada, will lower prices on five product lines in the next few months to dispose of excess profits it made during the fiscal year ended April 3, 1976.

However, company president Robert Hurlbut refused to say which products will go down in price or when the reductions will begin.

Hurlbut said the company does not want its competitors to know the price reductions in advance. He said coffee is not one of the products affected by the price reductions.

In its last fiscal year, General Foods had sales of $345 million and profits of $14.7 million.

Federal guidelines limit annual profits to 95 per cent of the profit earned in one of two optional base periods. General Foods had $1.4 million in excess profit in five of its 15 product lines.

Under the board's prices and profit regulations, any company which reports an excess in profits must submit a plan showing how it will dispose of the money. The company may give refunds, reduce prices temporarily or hold the line on prices and try to absorb costs.

General Foods' plan for disposing of its excess profits was approved by the board last week.

Six Top Film Prizes Taken by Canadians

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian film makers, most of them currently working at the National Film Board, won six of the top nine prizes at the international Film Festival which ended Sunday.

NFB film maker Caroline Leaf of Montreal won the grand prize for a 10-minute movie she painted on glass and shot frame by frame. Her color film, The Street, is based on a short story by Canadian novelist Mordecai Richler about the death of a grandmother in a Jewish family.

Leaf also won first prize in the films-for-children category with The Owl Who Married The Goose, depicting the Eskimo legend of an owl who marries a goose and does everything conceivable to become a goose. Sound effects are Eskimo voices.

A second NFB entry winner was Lynn Smith's Teacher, Lester Bit Me, showing a day-care teacher trying to cope with 15 rowdy children. Produced for the Education Development Centre of the NFB, the nine-minute film merited Smith first prize in the instructional films category.

A special jury prize went to the NFB's Mindscape, created by Jacques Drouin in one of the most difficult and rare animation techniques where millions of pins are used to create shadows.

The five-member film jury, representing Canada, the United States, Holland and Yugoslavia, had to choose the best three films in each of six categories from 108 competing films. An initial 465 movies were entered in the six-day festival with 37 Canadian films — more than any other country — remaining in the race.

The jury's special prize was awarded to animator Lotte Reiniger for her fairy tale film, Aucassin and Nicolette, the story of a prince in love. Reiniger, who now lives in London, England, worked for the NFB last year.

A witty story about the trouble dinosaurs faced when filling a gas tank rated first place for Dinosaur, directed by Bob Kurtz, who produced it as an ad for gasoline.

Jack Rothstein and Linn Hendry

VIOLIN-PIANO DUO FEATURED

A distinguished violin-piano duo from England will be featured Thursday in the summer series jointly sponsored by Victoria Art Gallery and the Conservatory of Music.

The violinist is Jack Rothstein, concert master, co-conductor and soloist with the internationally applauded Academy of St. Martin-in-the-Fields Chamber Orchestra of London. He is also a professor at the Royal Academy of Music and records for EMI, World Record Club and Unicorn.

His piano partner who works with him extensively in London is Linn Hendry, former Victorian and finalist in the CBC Talent Competition, who is yet another of the array of gifted and now professional pianists who have studied with Robin Wood.

In London, Miss Hendry is frequently heard as soloist and chamber musician on the BBC.

For their gallery concert Rothstein and Hendry have chosen piano and violin sonatas by Tartini, Mozart and Robert Schumann.

In a welcome departure from the almost exclusive Western European programming which has dominated the Summer music scene, they will offer three selections from Eastern Europe and one from Russia — the Perpetuum Mobile by Ottokar Novacek, two pieces, Un poco triste and Burleske by Josef Suk, and the Kreisler arrangement of Rimsky-Korsakov's Hymn to the Sun.

Gallery doors at 1040 Moss open at 7:30 p.m. for the 8 p.m. concert. For non-members of the gallery, the admission charge is 50 cents.

Landlord Legislation Inadequate, Says Report

OTTAWA (CP) — Governments must assure tenants security of tenure before wage, price and rent controls are lifted, says a Canadian Council on Social Development report.

The recently-released report argues that "no landlord should be allowed to dislodge a tenant by a rent increase without alternative and adequate accommodation being assured."

Rent controls in all provinces now give tenants some security but rent controls are at most a second-best solution to rental problems, the report says.

The report was written by Jeffrey Patterson, the council's housing program director, and Ken Watson, former research director for the British Columbia rent review director.

The council is a non-governmental body which carries out studies and encourages further development of social policies.

The authors say it would be "reckless to ever dismantle the current rent stabilization system without other fundamental changes in tenant legislation to guarantee security of tenure."

Under present legislation, tenants can be evicted only for breaking agreements recognized by the state. That could include failure to pay rent and property destruction.

"None of Canada's tenant legislation has gone as far as requiring landlords to find alternative accommodation for tenants if an increase cannot be afforded," the report says.

All provinces require that tenants be given three months notice of rent increases but government enforcement of this rule appears to be lax, the authors say.

The report urged that all provinces require rent increase notices to be provided by landlords.

Rented dwellings should also be registered with provincial agencies.

The authors speak approvingly of collective bargaining between tenants and landlords — as is done in Denmark — and recommends common lease anniversary dates in apartment buildings to make bargaining easier.

A straight rent control program does provide some protection against big rent increases but "could lead to reduced investment in rental housing in Canada, both in terms of new starts and the maintenance of existing housing," the report says.

Direct government construction and residential financing on a bigger scale and more subsidies for tenants should be part of a government housing program if controls are lifted, the report says.

Canadian Vaccine Firm Calls in MD Inspectors

TORONTO (CP) — Five physicians appointed by the Canadian Medical Association will begin an investigation of Connaught Laboratories Ltd. this fall at the request of laboratory officials.

Dr. E. S. Barootes, deputy-president of the association, said Monday that the study was requested because of concern by Canadian doctors about reports on the laboratory 18 months ago.

Federal health officials investigated Connaught in March, 1975, following published reports that said some vaccines produced in 1973 and 1974 failed to meet government standards.

March, 1975, following published reports that said some vaccines produced in 1973 and 1974 failed to meet government standards.

After the federal investigation, Health Minister Marc Lalonde said "certain deficiencies" were responsible for lapses in quality control but were being corrected.

Connaught was purchased in 1972 by the Canada Development Corp., from the University of Toronto. Concern was expressed at the time of the purchase that the laboratory might lose its public-service focus and its long-standing reputation for vaccine production.

Dr. Barootes said the study's purpose is to establish the reputation of vaccines and other materials produced at the laboratory and to discover whether problems exist.

The medical association will establish the terms of reference for the investigation and will publish the report, regardless of the findings, he said.

Chairman of the investigating committee is Dr. R. C. Dickson of Halifax, past-president of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada and professor emeritus of medicine at Dalhousie University.

Hockey Bill Shared

OTTAWA (CP) — A dispute that threatened to keep about two million Canadians from watching the Canada Grey Cup hockey series next month has been settled, Health Minister Marc Lalonde announced Monday.

He said in a statement that the CBC and the tournament's organizing committee . . . had agreed to share costs involved in transmitting the broadcasts to areas originally left out.

CBC had set the figure at $250,000 to feed its English and French-language stations in areas not covered by CTV and the private French network TVA which will telecast the games.

The CBC had said it was willing to carry the games but balked at paying the $250,000 because it would amount to the taxpayer subsidizing the committee and CTV-TVA which won the bid for the games although it could not cover all parts of the country.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS ...it tells you how

Well, now. If you didn't can your early cucumbers or your midsummer cucumbers, you'd better roll up your sleeves and get some of this year's late cucumbers safely stored away for the winter. A family just has to be prepared to satisfy that cold weather craving for something tangy to munch on, doesn't it? And what better preparation can there be than homemade dill pickles? Here's the recipe Jane Shuttleworth uses:

Wash four quarts of medium-sized cukes and let them stand overnight in cold water. Put a spray of dill in the bottom of a glass one-quart canning jar and pack the container as full of cucumbers as you can wedge them without bruising your future pickles. Repeat this packing process with additional jars until you've used up all your cukes. Top each container with another spray of dill and a clove of garlic. Add a small hot red pepper if you like, although many folks prefer to leave it out.

Next combine four cups of apple cider vinegar and one cup of salt in three quarts of water. Make sure that your salt is the pickling, dairy or kosher variety . . . rather than the so-called rock salt (which is not food-pure) or ordinary table salt (which contains iodine and other additives that will darken your pickles and cloud the brine around them).

Bring the vinegar-salt-water solution to a brisk rolling boil in a glass, stainless steel or unchipped enameled pan. Fill each jar to overflowing with the brine, seal the containers and store them in a cool dark place for at least a month. You've just canned dill pickles!

Innocent Lunches?

DEAR ABBY: Your viewpoint and that of other executives' wives on the subject of husbands taking their secretaries out to lunch would be appreciated. The claim that there's nothing "wrong" in it makes me bristle. I disapprove, but am almost ashamed to say so because I am called absurd, insecure and just plain childish.

I am married to an executive and this is my problem. I was formerly a secretary (not his) and never found "business" to be the topic of conversation when my boss invited me to lunch.

I wonder what the silent league — the secretaries' husbands — have to say? — NOBODY'S FOOL

DEAR NOBODY'S: Lunching with one's boss is not in itself morally wrong, but the attendant gossip can do much harm. Circumstances differ, however, and one must consider the boss, the secretary, the place and the frequency of such dates. And who's feeding whom what.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who is a wonderful person, but my husband thinks her husband is a terrible bore.

This friend has had us to her home for dinner several times, and I've been able to persuade my husband to go. But now he says, "No more!"

I have had this couple for dinner, and although my husband wasn't rude, he didn't urge them to stay longer when they said, rather early and halfheartedly, "I think we'd better be going."

Abby, I have entertained some of my husband's business friends, many of whom are bores, but I don't complain. So is it asking too much of him to do the same for me once in a while?

Why should we wives do all the giving? — EQUAL PARTNER

DEAR PARTNER: You shouldn't. And many don't. Why don't you play "let's make a deal"? As an equal partner, your husband should do as much for you as you do for him.

DEAR ABBY: The man signed DISGUSTED, who was wondering how to signal a waitress in a restaurant, should use a little common sense.

I've been a waitress for five years, and the first thing I do is let the customer know my name. If the waitress doesn't do this, the customer should ask. It saves a lot of confusion when he needs something if he knows exactly who waited on him.

I don't know any waitress who likes to be called "Hey, Girlie," or have someone whistle or snap his fingers to summon her.

Thanks for hearing our side —C.S.

DEAR C.S.: Not all waitresses want to be addressed by their names. Some feel it is too familiar. So unless the waitress is wearing a name pin, or introduces herself, I recommend calling her either "Miss" or "Waitress."

indoor gardens

By LYNN AND JOEL RAPP

It's surprising to us more people aren't into cactus growing. Probably it's because most people are either afraid of the thorns or just find themselves turned off by the starkness of cacti. But actually, cacti can be wonderful plants, especially if you've got a sunny, sunny window where almost any other plant would melt like a popsicle.

Rule No. 1 about caring for cacti — be careful. Another thing about cacti — most varieties will bloom if you keep your plant in a good, sandy soil and water when that soil gets bone dry, that is. Cacti make great gifts for children, especially the tiny plantlets that you can buy almost anywhere for under a dollar. We've got a nephew who's four years old and his very favorite thing is his "cackus" plant. We also have a 62-year-old uncle who has over 200 cacti. For years, we've been trying to get the band-aid concession at his house, but so far all we've been able to get is lots and lots of cacti. And you know what?

Replace 'Fried' Engine

By MICHAEL LAMM

Dear Mike: The engine in my 1970 Camaro recently fried. The thermostat stuck shut, the engine overheated, it melted the bearings, cracked the block, and ruined the radiator. The Camaro's body is perfect. I've owned the car since new, and the odo now shows 65,000 miles. Question: Should I replace the engine or trade for another car? — FRIED

Dear Fried: If this were my car, I'd seriously consider installing a used engine bought at a wrecking yard. We're talking now about a $700 swap, parts and labor. You could also go with a new factory short block, assuming your heads and accessories are okay. The tab in that case would come to about $1000. The reason I recommend a new engine is because you'd get only about $300 (actual) in a trade toward a new car.

Dear Mike: What's your opinion of these hot-wax sprays offered by car washes? Do they do any good? I've heard that the wax builds up on your windshield after a while and causes streaking. Any truth to that? — CURIOUS

Dear Curious: I've never had the windshield rumor resolved to my satisfaction one way or the other. In terms of economics, though, I feel you're better off getting a $25 hand-rubbed polish and wax job once a year — rather than paying $1.50 every couple of weeks for a very superficial wax spray.

Dear Mike: I have a 1973 Capri with Goodyear G-800 Grand Prix 70 radial tires. The car and these tires have 36,200 miles on them. My dealer tells me the tires are still good for another 10,000 miles, but they're getting very noisy. They make rhum-rhum sounds at various speeds. Could this be due to normal tire wear? Do I try for another 10,000 miles? — RHUM

Dear Rhum: If your tread-wear indicators aren't showing yet (they're the exposed bands across your tire tread), the noise probably indicates broken cords. You MIGHT get away with chancing another 10,000 miles from these tires. But why risk it? After all, 36,200 miles from fabric-belted radials isn't half bad. I'd start shopping for replacements now, checking the ads for tire sales.

Feel free to send your automotive questions to Mike Lamm, Box 7607, Stockton, Calif. 95207.

Those who have ever been attacked by black flies are not likely to forget the experience.

Black flies bite painlessly. Therefore you may not become aware of their viciousness until you see small drops of blood ooze from your skin.

The 20-page illustrated brochure "Black Flies" points out that attacks may occur throughout the summer, particularly in the northern regions of our country.

You can shield yourself against black flies by wearing protective clothing. The color of your clothes is also important. Light colors such as orange, yellow and light green don't attract black flies as much as dark colours, like blue, purple and red.

By LESTER L. COLEMAN, M.D.

Fifteen to twenty million people live in moderate to complete isolation, surrounded by a wall of silence, with little or no sympathy for the intensity of their problem and their dislocation from society.

The Federal Communications Commission is studying a system that will provide TV captions on television programs.

Setting up the programming device is complicated and in its early phases. When complete, it will open new horizons of enjoyment, participation and education to the deaf.

A special decoding device will make these captions visible only to those who want it. In no way will normal-hearing people be visually disturbed by the captions.

Despair and hope sometimes run parallel. When the pressure of despair becomes great enough, scientific attacks on the cause of despair open new avenues of hope.

Thousands of teenagers have this veneral disease without any evidence of symptoms.

Dr. Karen Hein has just completed a study on more than 3,000 sexually active adolescents, 12 to 16 years of age, who have been admitted to a New York City temporary detention centre.

Dr. Hein and her co-worker, Dr. Milton I. Cohen, at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine, say that they are particularly concerned about the potential complication of gonorrhea without symptoms because the absence of symptoms keeps the patient from presenting himself to the doctor.

The only hope that lies in this despairing study is that parents, educators and doctors will now combine their energies and talents to uncover hidden gonorrhea in young men and women and thus stop this epidemic.

Dr. Coleman welcomes letters from readers. Please write to him in care of The Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C.

When Lilacs Let Us Down . . .

Lilac, botanically Syringa, is a plant most gardeners remember from childhood. Nostalgia is the true reason for wanting it in the garden.

As far as most of us can remember, the old lilac of our youth bloomed freely year after year without any care or attention, and that could be the reason we think about it only at blossom time.

To own a lilac, either in bush or tree form, that fails to flower is frustrating to say the least. This happens in many gardens and the reason is being constantly sought.

Unfortunately it is not a question for which there is a simple answer, for the lilac is noted for its winter hardiness, and freedom of flowering. Without seeing the plants and knowing something of their history, any suggestions as to the cause would be pure guesswork and probably quite wrong.

While chance seedlings rarely appear, many claim to have received such plants from a neighbor. If they are true seedlings their main fault is not flowering.

Another reason for lack of flowers is removing and rooting sucker growths that so often appear around an old lilac.

About the only worthwhile use for these suckers is to plant them for a hedge, for they make a hedge that can be neatly trimmed without any feelings of guilt that flower buds are being removed.

Some gardeners have received sucker growths from friends and been surprised to find they had plants of common Privet as used for hedges.

In the past it was a regular commercial practice to graft lilac to common privet. Sucker growths always come from roots therefore are privet and not lilac.

This practice was discouraged because of a graft blight which caused the lilacs to deteriorate rapidly and die after a few years.

About the only useful help we can give with lilac problems is to state the requirement of these plants and leave the gardener to decide what is lacking.

Providing one starts with a nursery produced plant of a named variety, the only reason for not flowering will be an unsuitable environment.

Lilacs do best in a rich, moist, rather heavy soil, and should be planted in the open full sun, well apart from other plants.

These conditions are rarely met in the average garden, for lilacs are frequently planted in odd corners and completely forgotten until flowering time.

They usually suffer from poor soil, lack of sufficient moisture during summer when flower buds are initiated, crowding by other plants, and only a small portion of a full day's sunlight.

The lilac needs an alkaline soil with lime, therefore will not flourish near rhododendrons, conifers, or other acid soil plants.

Bonemeal is their fertilizer because it supplies lime, and dressings should be alternated each year with a mulch of compost or old cow manure.

Being lime lovers the lilacs will not tolerate peat moss, nor should they be planted in soil to which peat moss has been added in the past. Constant moisture at their roots in summer is important, but that does not mean bog conditions. The compost or old manure mulch helps to prevent rapid drying of the soil and lessens the frequency of artificial watering.

Pipeline Cost Spiralling By Millions, Firms Say

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Ltd. said Monday the cost of its proposed northern pipeline has increased by $900 million to $8.4 billion.

It told the National Energy Board the increase covers an updating of costs in terms of the value of the dollar in 1976 and a delay of one year to July 1, 1982, in putting a pipeline in operation.

Earlier in the day, rival Foothills Pipe Lines Ltd. estimated its costs had risen by almost $500 million to $2.9 billion.

But that estimate covers only the construction of pipeline in the Northwest Territories. Expansion of existing pipelines in Alberta and British Columbia to complete the line would add about another $2 billion.

The estimates were filed at the request of the National Energy Board, now hearing evidence on the two competing applications.

Foothills seeks permission to build a line that would carry only Mackenzie Delta gas to domestic markets. Arctic Gas wants to build a joint line to move both Delta and Alaskan gas to markets at home and in the United States.

In its latest filing, Arctic Gas says its cost estimates cover only the construction of a pipeline in Canada. Cost of building a line through Alaska and additional facilities to distribute supplies south of the border would be studied by U.S. regulatory agencies.

Arctic Gas said the initial cost of putting the pipeline into operation would be $7.4 billion, an increase of $800 million on earlier estimates.

That would provide a line capable of carrying 3.25 billion cubic feet of gas a day. Additional investment of $1 billion would be needed to raise its capacity to 4.5 billion cubic feet, a volume the company assumes will be reached in 1986.

"This additional investment of $1 billion would be generated almost entirely by revenues from the operation of the pipeline," company chairman William Wilder said in a statement. "It would not represent additional public financing."

Any additional pipeline capacity needed across Alberta and British Columbia to complete the Foothills project would be built by Alberta Gas Trunk Line Ltd. and Westcoast Transmission Co., the two parent companies of Foothills.

Exact cost figures for the project are not expected until November when Alberta Gas Trunk files its new figures.

Meanwhile, suggestions that it hold a discussion on plans to file an application for a third pipeline from the North were rejected today by the NEB.

Canadian Arctic Gas earlier asked the board to make time this week in its northern hearings to talk about when the new application will be filed and what procedure will be followed.

The application in question is for the Canadian portions of the Alcan pipeline route which would be built by Foothills and associated companies to move Alaskan gas to the United States.

Black Children Smash Windows

Times News Services

JOHANNESBURG — Stone-throwing black schoolchildren smashed the windows of a bus near Pretoria today in protest against the detention of their headmaster by security police, school officials said.

The violence erupted while anti-government demonstrations simmered in black townships in various parts of the country after two months of unrest in which 217 persons have died.

The Mamelodi students were demonstrating against the detention of Joe Motau, acting principal of their school who was one of about 60 black leaders arrested by security police throughout South Africa last week.

At the coastal town of Port Elizabeth, police used tear gas to break up about 500 demonstrating schoolchildren at the Kwazekele high school, a police official said. No injuries were reported.

At the city's Bethelsdorp colored (malatto) suburb, regular and traffic police dispersed a protest march by about 400 colored students attending the Dower Teachers Training College. The students handed a statement to college rector, E. Fischer, saying they were boycotting lectures in sympathy with black anti-government demonstrations.

In an earlier incident, police chased hundreds of colored students through the streets Monday, clubbing them with batons when they refused to break up a demonstration in support of arrested students.

More than 20 leading South African figures are known to have been detained and unconfirmed reports put the figure as high as 50.

Security police in Port Elizabeth said Monday night that they have detained Rev. Mzwandile Magina, 38-year-old president of the African Independent Churches Association. No reason was given.

Teachers Urged To Take Part In Politics

NARAMATA (CP) — Teachers should become increasingly involved in political activity to improve the quality of education, Bill Broadley, president of the British Columbia Teachers Federation, said at the summer conference of the BCTF here.

He outlined priorities for action facing the BCTF in the coming year, including resources, class size, salaries and disadvantaged students.

There seems to be a fear in North America of having teachers politically involved, Broadley said.

"Political action should be and has got to be viewed in the end positively as an activity of a democratic society."

Martian Soil Compared to Antarctic

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Viking 1, trying to find life in the cold dry Martian surface, would have as much luck digging through some areas of the Antarctic, a scientist said Monday.

Viking 2, photographing possible landing sites, has turned up more geological puzzles in the northern latitudes.

Dr. George Sands of Viking mission control said soil samples were collected from a number of spots around the world and tested in an instrument similar to the one on Mars.

"Among those with the lowest concentrations were soils obtained from the dry valleys in South Victoria Land," he said. That is an area adjacent to McMurdo Sound.

The instrument in question, an organic molicule analyzer, was looking for complex carbon compounds, the building blocks of life on earth. None were found above the concentration of one part per million.

"It does not exlude the possibility there may be smaller organic molecules present," Sands said.

The second stage in a biological experiment was started Monday. Soil in the pyrolytic release test gave surprising results earlier. The soil sample was sterilized Monday and another test sequence will begin.

"If a difference is detected on the next sequence," Sands said, "it would suggest the first response was biological."

Viking 2, which was orbiting the red planet, sent back pictures showing unusual geological patterns in a possible landing area. Viking 2 is to put down between Sept. 3 and 6 in one of three northern areas.

"In some areas we see very strong patterns of parallel lines that look like contour plowing," Dr. Hal Masursky said. "This is a new feature for us. It's a puzzle."

He said they didn't look like geological terracing on earth, but something done by man "except hundreds of times that size."

Curfew, Patrols To Beat Gangs

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit is rehiring 450 laid-off policemen two weeks early and imposing a curfew on persons younger than 18 to prevent recurrence of what the police chief called a small-scale riot on the downtown streets after a rock concert.

"We're going to take the city back — beginning tonight," Deputy Mayor William Beckham said Monday in announcing the measures.

He and Police Chief Philip Tannian said police lacked the resources to cope with the disturbance, which started when several hundred youths attacked a crowd Sunday night at the city's Cobo Hall. It ended in widespread robberies and assaults, including one rape, on the downtown streets. Forty-seven persons were arrested.

"It was an outright, flagrant challenge to our security and to police authority in Detroit, and we failed to meet it," Beckham mayor said. "It won't again."

The 450 policemen, laid off because of the city's financial crisis, were to have been rehired Sept. 1 with federal funds and would have returned to regular work. Instead, police said, most will be deployed in special crime-fighting units.

Beckham said the early recall will cause a temporary budget deficit of $432,000 that might require cuts elsewhere to balance. He did not specify what cuts might be made.

The police department, admittedly caught off guard by the attack, promised to put an end to the violence and to begin rounding up known gang leaders.

"We're no longer going to wait for an invitation from anybody," said Chief Tannian.

He said newly beefed-up police patrols would fan across the city over the next 24 to 48 hours arresting gang leaders.

Police arrested 47 persons, 41 of them juveniles, following Sunday night's attack on Cobo Hall during a concert by the Average White Band and Kool and the Gang. The audience was largely white.

Witnesses said the black youths broke into the downtown convention centre, assaulting and robbing dozens of rock fans as they fled into the streets. One woman was stripped and raped on the sidewalk. Police said at least two other women also were raped.

ATLANTIC FISH SHOW TRACES OF KEPONE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Traces of the roach poison Kepone, the cause of liver and brain damage in Virginia chemical workers, have turned up in non-hazardous levels in fish caught hundreds of miles from the plant where it was made, a U.S. federal agency says.

The pesticide residue was found in migratory fish caught by commercial fishermen in Chesapeake Bay and the Atlantic Ocean off the coasts of Delaware, New Jersey and New York.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) said today that all of its first samples of fish taken from the Chesapeake and Atlantic Ocean showed traces of Kepone, but not at levels considered hazardous.

The initial results are preliminary, however, and it will be at least 10 weeks before federal scientists can determine how seriously Kepone pollution has spread.

The agency said seven samples of fish from Chesapeake Bay-four of croaker and three of bluefish — showed Kepone residues ranging up to .09 parts per million ppm. That is just short of the .1 ppm level that would send the FDA into action to keep the fish off the market.

RAY UPSTAGES ROCKY

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Sorry, Nelson Rockefeller. We were waiting for you, but along came Elizabeth Ray.

Outside Kemper Arena, state troopers cleared a path for the vice-president. Network camera crews pushed and shoved for space.

The vice-president swept down the stairs, shook a few hands, waved, said, "how are you," and was swallowed up by the secret service men.

The lights go out. People start to walk away. And there, suddenly there in the wisps of tobacco smoke and unguarded light bulbs she stood, a vision in white, her platinum hair falling shoulder length, clutching a small black tape recorder: "Elizabeth Ray — Genesis Magazine." So read the generous card on her generous bosom.

One fellow walked over and began talking. A photographer took a picture. Another moved. More surged in. Lights came back on. More shoving and cursing. The word spread in a rush of whispers, Elizabeth Ray, in the soft, soft flesh was here at last.

The senses reeled. Nelson Rockefeller, okay, you see him all the time on the tube. But here was Elizabeth Ray. You remember, the one who "worked" in Washington for the congressman, the one who said she couldn't type.

A television newsman aimed his microphone at her. She aimed hers back at him.

"Who do you think will be nominated?" the reporter asked. "Who do you think will be nominated?" Miss Ray shot back, her small tape recorder whirring.

Then the CBS newswoman with the familiar face closed in. There was no nonsense in the penetrating hazel eyes. She asked Miss Ray if she thought she got her job because of sex or on her ability. "On my ability," Miss Ray said, smiling.

What are you going to write about, asked another.

"Read about it in Genesis," Miss Ray said.

Drug Price Mistrial Declared

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A mistrial was declared Monday in the trial of the United States government's suit against five drug manufacturers seeking about $203 million in damages for alleged price-fixing.

U.S. District Judge Miles Lord cited prejudicial publicity in his ruling. He said he was concerned about "the cumulative effect of a barrage of publicity over a year and a half may be such that instructions and inquiry are not sufficient."

Lord also decided that the lengthy trial with its technical, detailed testimony, has "tired and confused" jurors.

It was not clear Monday what the next step will be.

Young Cleared Of Fraud Charge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal prosecutors found no evidence of fraud by Rep. John Young, accused by his secretary of demanding sexual favors from her in return for a high salary, the U.S. justice department says.

The department confirmed reports Monday that prosecutors will recommend the investigation be closed for lack of evidence. The Washington Star quoted unnamed sources to that effect Monday.

A spokesman for the justice department said the report was accurate.

Young was accused by his secretary, Colleen Gardner, 30, that he had paid her a salary of nearly $26,000 a year for only limited duties that would not interfere with her availability for sexual liaisons.

Mrs. Gardner says she is bewildered by the federal prosecutors decision against pressing criminal charges.

Young, said in a statement from his Victoria, Tex., office that he is "pleased but not surprised at the position taken by the department of justice relative to the allegations made against me."

Meanwhile, in Salt Lake City, Judge Bryant Croft says publicity surrounding the arrest of Rep. Allan Howe on a misdemeanor charge of soliciting sex has surpassed media coverage of Utah's most famous recent murder case.

SALMON PINCHED

MANCHESTER, Wash. (AP) — The FBI says it is mystified by the theft of 25 rare Atlantic salmon from the National Marine Fisheries Service research station here.

"We just don't have a whole lot to go on," said agent Norm Hall of the July theft.

The salmon, weighing from 8 to 25 pounds, were considered highly valuable from a research standpoint. They were stolen by poachers who raided the station in boats during the night.

The thieves also stole numerous special chinook and cuthroat salmon and did damage to a net pen system.

Though the cutthroat and chinook research programs will survive, a five-year Atlantic salmon program effectively was ruined, a service spokesman said. Damage was estimated at $60,000 because of the research value placed on the fish.

Pacific Press Still Suspended

VANCOUVER (CP) — Both sides in the Pacific Press Ltd. dispute met all day Monday under a provincial mediator but failed to reach agreement on conditions for a resumption of operations.

Pacific Press which produces the morning Province and the evening Sun, suspended publication Aug. 7 following several days of work slowdowns and study sessions by some of the 1,400 employees.

Ed Peck, vice-chairman of the B.C. Labor Relations Board, met separately with representatives from the company and the joint council of newspaper unions representing seven unions at Pacific Press.

He said some agreement was reached with both sides but there are unresolved matters to be discussed, probably during a meeting to be held today.

Peck declined to comment on the unresolved issues.

Dave Stinson, Pacific Press general manager, also refused to say what had been discussed, but said both sides made some progress in developing a back-to-work agreement.

Stinson said if an agreement can be reached, production could resume almost immediately and a newspaper could be published one day after a return to work.

The dispute developed after Stinson told the joint council that the company wouldn't pay full wage increases in a new two-year contract until the federal Anti-Inflation Board had ruled on them.

The contract, which was ratified by the unions a month ago, called for a 16 per cent wage increase in the first year and eight per cent in the second year. A senior reporter made $320 a week under the previous contract.

The 16 per cent increase is retroactive to Nov. 1, 1975, the first day after the last contract expired.

The company took its case to the labor relations board, which supported the position that Pacific Press could face massive legal liability if it paid increases above federal guidelines before the Anti-Inflation Board approved them.

Court Rules Paper Biased Against Gays

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice James MacDonald of the B.C. Supreme Court has dismissed an appeal by the Vancouver Sun against a board of inquiry finding that the newspaper had discriminated against a homosexual group when it rejected an advertisement.

In a judgment released Monday, Mr. Justice MacDonald says the majority of the board of inquiry "found that the real reason behind the policy of the newspaper was not a concern for any standard of human decency—but a personal bias against homosexuals and homosexuality on the part of various individuals within its management."

The board was appointed under the Human Rights code of B.C. after the Gay Alliance Toward Equality complained that the Sun had refused an advertisement put out by the group.

The board ordered the Sun to stop contravening the human rights code, to make the facilities of the advertising department available to the group and to refrain from contravening the code in future.

School Districts Bargain Jointly

The six school districts on Southern Vancouver Island have joined forces to bargain with teacher associations.

School districts of Greater Victoria, Sooke, Saanich, the Gulf Islands, Cowichan and Lake Cowichan will form one of 13 salary-bargaining zones in B.C., Education Minister Pat McGeer said Monday.

For the first time last year, five south Island school districts established zonal bargaining. Sooke district did not participate.

Teacher associations have until Sept. 25 to decide whether they want to participate in the zonal bargaining process or negotiate individually.

Weed Aid Eyed

KELOWNA (CP) — Ray Perrault, government leader in the senate, said Monday the federal government might give this city financial aid for its weed eradication program in Okanagan Lake.

Whales Last Year?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bob Hunter, president of the Greenpeace Foundation, said Monday he suspects Russian whalers now are concentrating on the last pods of sperm whales and that this year may be the last for the mammals.

Speaking from the Greenpeace Seven, a converted minesweeper, Hunter said the anti-whaling expedition was in the north Pacific about 1,000 miles north of Hawaii and was expecting to confront the Russian whaling fleet soon.

Belt Overheats

VANCOUVER (CP) — Six fire trucks and a fire boat were called Monday night when bearings seized in a mashing machine at the United Grain Growers' grain elevator and a conveyor belt overheated. A fire department spokesman said that although there was no fire the situation was potentially dangerous.

Early Verdict Urged On Heart Unit Fund

Tory leader Scott Wallace Monday urged Health Minister Bob McClelland to make a decision quickly on extra funding for the expansion of Royal Jubilee Hospital's open heart surgery unit.

Hospital officials submitted a brief to the government in April asking for an extra $60,000 which would allow them to expand the capacity of the unit from four operations a week to six.

Health department officials said last week a recommendation from a health advisory committee will be presented to McClelland soon.

Wallace said patients on the open heart surgery waiting list have been phoning him because their surgery appointments have been postponed.

"I can well understand how anxious these patients must be and I am in the process of doing all I can to expedite the required expansion of facilities at the cardiac surgery unit," Wallace said.

SOVIET DEFECTOR CHANGES HIS MIND

OTTAWA (CP) — Sergei Nemtsanov, the Soviet diver who defected during the Olympic Games, has told immigration department officials he intends to return home, a department spokesman said today.

Nemtsanov, 17, declared his intention in a meeting with officials in Montreal Monday evening but added he wanted "to sleep on it," the spokesman said.

The immigration officer that met Nemtsanov Monday was the same official who attended a meeting July 31 between the diver and Soviet embassy staff.

The department spokesman said the officer told Nemtsanov the next step is up to him and "we're waiting to hear from him again."

If Nemtsanov decides to return to the Soviet Union, it would be up to him how he went, the spokesman said. He has been granted a minister's permit that expires at the end of January. After that he could apply for refuge or landed immigrant status. Both steps would require cabinet approval.

An immigration official said Nemtsanov had spent some time since his defection July 29 on a vacation in Ontario with a Canadian friend.

Nemtsanov's departure from the Soviet team during the Olympic summer games sparked angry charges by the Soviet Union the youth had been "kidnapped" and "brainwashed."

For a time, the Soviets threatened to cut sports links with Canada, raising the possibility that a scheduled hockey series between the two countries would be called off. The Soviets later withdrew the threat.

Consumers Owe $20B

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian consumer owed $20.26 billion at the end of June, a 17.3 per cent increase in consumer credit over the total a year earlier, Statistics Canada reported Monday.

Personal loans from chartered banks accounted for $14.84 billion of this total, a 23.7 per cent increase from a year earlier.

Among the other larger lenders were life insurance companies with policy loans of $1.19 billion, up seven per cent, and department stores and furniture, television and radio and appliance stores that had outstanding credit of $1.27 billion, a six per cent increase from a year earlier.

Toll 1,800, Rising In Filipino Quake

Times News Services

A killer earthquake struck the southern Philpines today, toppling concrete buildings, spawning a 15-foot tidal wave and killing 1,800 persons — many swept away from coastal homes.

The death toll was rising steadily as reports came in from stricken areas.

The centre of the earthquake, which struck just after midnight, was under the Celebes Sea. But it was the resulting tidal wave, sweeping over the scattered islands in the area and washing away homes as people slept, that apparently caused most of the deaths.

President Ferdinand Marcos declared a state of emergency over densely-populated Mindanao Island, the worst-hit area, and the nearby islands of Sulu, Basilan and Tawi Tawi, all swamped by the wave. Dozens of buildings, including schools, collapsed on Mindanao, officials here said.

The quake, which registered 7.8 on the open-ended Richter Scale, was felt in Manila, more than 500 miles away, but it caused no damage there. It was felt all over the southern islands and on parts of southern Luzon, the northern island.

Marcos said 19 persons were buried alive by falling buildings in Cotabato, a city of 100,000.

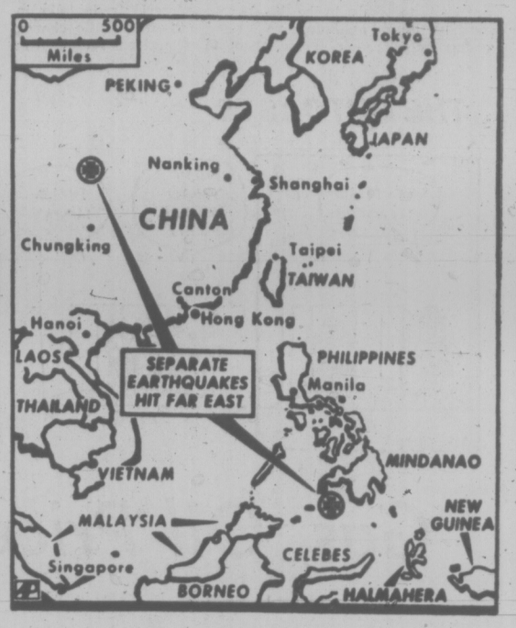
A span on the Quirino bridge, linking Cotabato with Davao, on the opposite side of the island, collapsed as did two multi-storey hotels and a department store.

The Philippine quake came on the heals of a major earthquake that rocked western China Monday night. That tremor was reported centred on a city of 50,000 people and might have been much more serious than originally believed.

Chinese officials told an Australian diplomat the epicentre of the shock, China's second big quake in three weeks, was Mienyang — a big trading and silk-manufacturing centre on the main railway line from Chengtu to northern China.

Foreign monitoring stations had earlier put the epicentre about 100 miles further north in a sparsely-populated mountain region near the borders of Szcechwan province and Kansu.

Northeast China was hit by a quake July 28 that measured 8.2, the strongest in the world in 12 years.



Volcanic Bang Just the Start?

Times News Services

POINTE-A-PITRE, Guadeloupe — Scientists say they can't predict whether the spectacular eruption of the La Soufriere volcano which had been expected for days is still in the offing after a minor eruption of the volcano Monday night spared neighboring villages and caused no major damage.

The scientists, who have been predicting that an eruption of catastrophic force is imminent, made a helicopter flight over the danger zone today. Later, they said it was impossible to forecast whether there might be more volcanic activity.

Heavy clouds and bad general weather conditions stopped the team of experts from flying directly over the crater of the volcano on this French Caribbean island.

Dr. Robert Brousse of the University of Paris, who was in the helicopter, said:

"There was no damage in the neighboring communities. We overflew the villages and they're all intact. The rivers aren't flowing with mud. But there is a very dense cloud of ash that stopped us from flying over the town of Baillif."

Baillif was one of the communities evacuated during the weekend as the volcano in the 4,813-foot peak gave signs it would soon go up. In all, about 72,000 people were moved out of the danger zone — more than 20 per cent of Guadeloupe's population. Police estimate there are about 50 people who refused to leave their homes.

The erruption came at 7:45 p.m. local time Monday and the earth quivered as far as 20 miles away. A scientific team near the volcano was removed to a ship offshore, but returned to the island this morning to start its investigation.

The blast Monday night was heard 10 miles from the volcano.

After the eruption, Brousse said: "The circumstances showed that we were right in our predictions."

He said the tremors emananating from the volcano would not have sufficient strength to topple buildings outside the danger zone.

LABOR SHARE UP 17%

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor's share of national income rose by 17 per cent during the 12 months ended in May to $8.81 billion, Statistics Canada reported Monday.

Included in the latest figures are large lump-sum payments made during May in anticipation of final contract settlements, which pushes up the percentage increase on a year-over-year basis.

The consumer price index, the most commonly used measure of inflation, rose by 8.9 per cent in the same 12-month period.

Gas Prices Rising

The wholesale prices of gasoline and home heating oil will rise in September and the only question is how much.

Spokesmen for the oil industry in B.C. said today the increases will likely be in the range of 3.5 cents a gallon for heating oil and about four cents a gallon for gasoline, but that in either case it would depend on approval by the B.C. Energy Commission.

The increases are necessary, they said, to offset the rise in price of crude oil which went up three cents a gallon to $9.05 a 35-gallon barrel on July 1.

The price increase approved by the Anti-Inflation Board, was not passed on then because by federal-provincial agreement a freeze was instituted to give the major oil companies time to make inventory adjustments. The freeze ends Aug. 30.

Federal Energy Minister Allister Gillespie has recommeded a 3.5 cent a gallon increase, allowing 3.2 cents to reflect the increased wellhead price, 0.1 cent for the increased cost of capital, and 0.2 cents for higher gathering

Empty Shelves In Safeways

A shipping shutdown is already taking effect at Safeway's 10 Greater Victoria stores and shoppers for some items are being met with bare shelves.

Items like cheese and ice-cream are selling for half-price and today's early shoppers took full advantage of the mark-downs.

Cashiers, were issuing tips on food freezing as customers baskets loaded with the sale items, passed through the check-out counters.

Several counters — fresh produce and luncheon meats especially — were already bare.

Customers are met with a sign apologizing for the lack of some foodstuffs "due to warehouse problems" and area manager Jack Fidler said today he expects supplies will last at least until the end of the week.

Meanwhile, other food stores are reporting an increase in sales.

There has been no moves toward settlement of the contract dispute that led to the lockout of 800 warehouse and supply firm employees here in Victoria and Burnaby and Dawson Creek last Friday.

Al Peterson, negotiator for the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union, said there are 51 contract issues remaining unresolved.

Another Socred Hired

Dianne Hartwick, the defeated candidate for the presidency of the Social Credit Party, has been appointed executive assistant to Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy at $19,500 a year.

Hartwick was defeated in her bid for the presidency at the convention last October by Peter Hyndman, who replaced McCarthy in the job. She was regarded as McCarthy's hand-picked successor to the presidency.

McCarthy said Hartwick will have "special duties in special services co-ordination with the department of human resources."

"Her initial assignment with the department of human resources will be a review of pre-school services and other school board services for handicapped children," McCarthy said. "This function will require intensive work with associations concerned with the blind, deaf, cerebral palsy, multiple sclerosis and other handicapped conditions."

McCarthy last month appointed her former campaign manager John Plul to the newly-created $27,000-a-year job as convention promoter for the province.

She also appointed Dick Lillico, a Socred worker, to a $22,200-a-year job as director of information services in B.C. House, London, England.

Ford Close to Nomination As Reagan Backers Waver

Washington Post

KANSAS CITY — Amid growing tension and clear signs that President Ford was closing in on the presidential nomination, the Republican National Convention opened Monday night.

While both sides manoeuvred in anticipation of a key procedural vote tonight, the president picked up more delegates, and others appeared to be wavering in their support for challenger Ronald Reagan.

At the end of the day the Washington Post delegate count gave Ford 1,126 delegates, (UPI reported Ford had gained 1,130 delegates. AP said he was three short.) Reagan had 1,034 delegates, while only 99 delegates remained uncommitted.

Only in their repeated denunciations of Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter, who holds commanding leads in the polls over both Ford and Reagan, did the Republicans who jammed the flag-bedecked Kemper Arena seem united.

On a day when the rivalry of the two camps produced repeated shouts of "We Want Reagan" and "We Want Ford" on the convention floor and spontaneous demonstrations for the wives of the two candidates, there were these other developments:

—Former Illinois Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie, chairman of his delegation and a Ford supporter, claimed that two members of his delegation had been offered bribes by Reagan supporters. He produced no evidence of his charge.

The allegation provoked Reagan into a denunciation of Ogilvie. The former California governor expressed "surprise and disgust" at the "falsehood" and suggested that the Ford campaign was practising dirty tricks.

—New York Senator James L. Buckley withdrew his presidential candidacy before it really began, leaving the convention as a clear two-man test between Ford and Reagan.

—Despite Ford's steady gain in delegate strength, a key Ford strategist said that the test today on a vital procedural vote was "wide open and could go either way."

He was referring to a proposal rejected by the convention rules committee Sunday that would make a major test of a Reagan-sponsored plan to force Ford to select his running mate before the presidential nominating ballot. There were signs that this vote would cross candidate

Sewer Robbers Hit Again

Times News Services

PARIS — A gang tunnelled up through sewers and into a bank to empty 200 safe-deposit boxes in what appeared to be a repeat of a spectacular bank robbery in Nice last month, police said today.

The thieves, working during the weekend, drilled through an underground concrete wall to reach the vaults of the Societe Generale branch located on the exclusive Ile Saint-Louis, home of many French film stars and politicians.

No official figure was given on the value of the haul but a police spokesman said it is possible the amount may exceed the $12 million taken by the gang that robbed the Societe Generale in Nice.

The robbery was discovered when the bank reopened after a three-day holiday weekend.

Police said the thieves had installed their own ventilation system in the tunnel to ensure that they were not asphyxiated by the fumes of their drilling equipment.

The robbery took place at the height of the vacation season when many of the bank's wealthy clients use their safe-deposit boxes for their valuables.

The Nice robbers, who were reported to have used getaway motorboats, dug a 25-foot tunnel, shored up coalmine-style from a sewer into the underground vault of the Societe Generale branch bank. They welded the vault door shut from the inside to delay investigation and used acetylene torches to open eight safes in the vault and rifle 200 safe deposit boxes.

U.S. Tuna Boats Sent Packing, Canadian Irate

A Nanaimo salmon fisherman is indignant over the "high-handed treatment" given American fishermen Monday in Winter Harbor on the west coast of Vancouver Island by the fisheries patrol vessel Tanu.

Ken Campbell, owner of the 44-foot troller The Chariot, radioed from Winter Harbor, 40 miles south of Cape Scott, complaining that the Tanu had forced 10 to 12 "American Tuna boats that had come into Winter Harbor for shelter and fuel to go outside the 12 miles fishing limit in winds that were blowing 30 miles an hour.

He said the boats were evicted about 5 p.m.

"We've always been very well treated when we go into Washington ports. This is kind of high-handed treatment for neighboring boats," Campbell said.

But Capt. Mitch Gay of Vancouver, head of the fisheries' marine division, said today the Tanu was only doing her job and had actually been lenient with the American fishermen.

Gay said, under Canada's Coastal Fisheries Protection Act, no foreign fishing vessel is allowed into a Canadian port except in case of emergencies or foul weather.

"The master of the Yanu is a fine master mariner. Seamen are always sympathetic to other seamen," Gay said, "He would never have forced them out if the weather was that bad. Tuna trollers are good seaworthy boats."

When told of Campbell's claim that Canadian fishermen are welcomed in American ports, Gay said American authorities would seize Canadian boats that enter their ports, except in emergency situations.

"He (Campbell) couldn't have been fishing at the time," Gay said.

He said the fuel barge had not been in Winter Harbor on Monday and that the Tanu had been kind enough to allow three of the American boats back into the harbor today to refuel, even though it is against the law.

By January, 1977, Gay said Canada's 200-mile limit will probably be in effect and, unless American fishermen are licenced, they will have to keep outside the new limits.

"He (Campbell) probably had a friend among the Americans," Gay said, "But most fishermen wouldn't agree with him. They're out catching fish that Canadians should be getting."

How Long Can Blip Trip Last?

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

It used to be DING, DING — FLASH — DINGITY-DING-DING, but now there is just a sedate blip, blip, bzzz.

The penny arcade pinball machine, a popular pastime since its invention in Chicago in 1930, has given way to the eminently more respectable electronic video game.

But pinball wizards shouldn't despair. The flashy electronic gadgets may be just that — a flash in the pan.

That's the feeling of distributor Brian Hill of Christie-Hill Enterprises Ltd., 727 Johnson, who says the popularity of electronic games — only a few years old — is already waning.

But not so, says R. B. Alexander of the Ryan vending company. He is trying to get more electronic machines imported from the U.S. manufacturers.

Hill feels the industry is destroying itself by offering new more sophisticated games almost daily. And as they get more expensive, each game has to stay popular longer to show a profit.

Alexander, however, said a good machine in a good location pays for itself quickly, and after patrons tire of it, it can be moved to another location.

"Sure I've got some of the older models sitting around, but they paid for themselves," he said. And they can be auctioned off to a foreign purchaser for a run in another country.

The equipment basically consist of a computer-like console, run by electronic circuitry which flashes various images on a video screen.

The screen serves as a sort of field of play, and depending on the set-up, players are pitted against the machine of another player — with the machine and its little box collecting quarters the ultimate winner.

On a few games, players who are really good can win free games like pinball. When that happens, the games are moved to another location where quarters will be fed in regularly again.

But most machines have what industry insiders call an "ace in the hole".

This is the ace in the hole — the shot that goes to the machine no matter how good the players are. Hill said the longest a tennis game is programmed to run is about three minutes, regardless of the expertise of the players.

So plunk another quarter in fellas, the game's unbeatable.

It is the lack of control Hill feels will bring about the demise of the electronic video games — at least in Canada.

For some reason, he says, the Americans seem less concerned with this factor.

At the University of Miami, one machine was being fed 3,000 quarters a week. It became a college cult.

But Canadians seem to grow tired of them more quickly and a distributor can get burned if someone comes along with a better machine and the outlet, such as a beer parlor, wants the new one, Hill said.

"A Canadian's make-up is different, perhaps it's ego," Hill speculates. "If he can't control what's going on, he doesn't want to get involved.

"A common feeling today is that machines control so much of our lives, we don't want them controlling our leisure time, too."

Hill said that's why pool, shuffleboard and even pinball are still popular and will continue to be — the player has control over the time and action of the game.

In the electronic games, he goes as fast as the machine dictates.

Electronic video games were originally designed as executives' playthings Hill said. And there's no doubt they found their way into places where pinball machines would never tread — cocktail lounges, fancy hotels, and even the B.C. Ferries and the Princess Marguerite.

But they turned out to be more popular with young people than with adults, and if they continue to be successful, it will be because of the continuing search by today's youth for more sophisticated gadgetry for entertainment.

Swine Vaccine Ordered

The B.C. health department has ordered two types of swine vaccine from the federal government for a fall vaccination program, Health Minister Bob McClelland said today.

The minister said his department has ordered vaccine for protection against both swine flu and Victoria flu.

The province has still not been told how much of the flu vaccine being imported by Ottawa will be allocated to B.C. nor has a definite date been given for arrival of the vaccine.

One of the vaccines, which provides protection against both types of flu, will be offered as soon as it arrives to people of all ages who have chronic illnesses which could be worsened by a flu attack.

Any surplus of this vaccine will be offered to people over 65 years of age.

The second vaccine, which protects only against swine flu, will be used for a province-wide mass immunization program for healthy people if there is an outbreak of swine flue reported anywhere in the world.

McClelland said there have been no reported cases of swine flu since the outbreak in the U.S. last spring.

The dual vaccine will be given by public health staff and community clinics and by nursing staff where recipients are living in an extended care facility. Times and location for public clinics will be announced as soon as it is known when the vacine will be available.

Man's Body Recovered

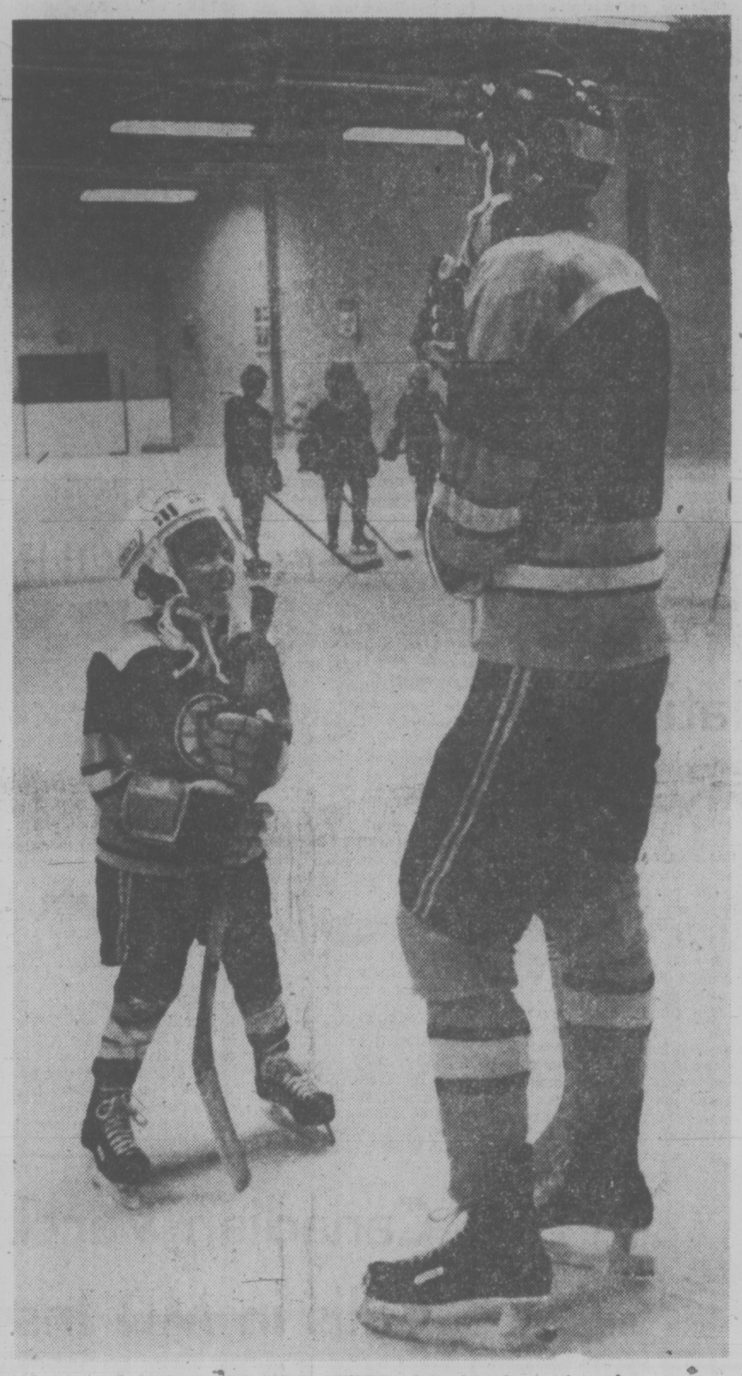
Roderick Finlayson, 32, disappeared Aug. 4 at the south end of the lake. His empty boat was found drifting in the area.

RCMP said an inquiry will likely be held.



THE LONG AND SHORT of it, friends, is that summer (what there was of it) appears to be long gone. Sporting goods stores are already reporting a big run on hockey equipment sales and hockey schools, a sure harbinger of chilly days, are in full swing. At Esquimalt Arena, John Barberie, 7, takes a breather with Vincent Gobas, 15, between drills. (Bill Halkett photo)

Spring Start Seen On Water Scheme

The executive director of the Capital Region Board said today that construction on a trunk water system to supply the Saanich Peninsula might start next spring and cost $2 to $3 million.

While ratepayers in the municipalities of Central Saanich, Sidney and North Saanich will pay for it, Dennis Young said he understands there will be some financial help from both federal and provincial governments.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis announced Monday that the regional board will take on the role of water supply agency on the drought-plagued peninsula, with the three municipalities in future handling distribution within their own boundaries.

The decision comes as a first step in reorganizing what has been a fragmented water supply and distribution situation generating bickering for years.

Curtis' decision, which came after meetings with water boards, councils, the region and the Greater Victoria water district, reflects the choice of the majority.

Under it water for the peninsula, which has come from Elk Lake, small reservoirs and wells, will eventually be supplied by the Greater Victoria Water District from the Sooke watershed.

The fater district will sell in bulk to the regional board, which will build a trunk system from the Central Saanich border to Sidney and North Saanich.

Each of the three municipalities will tap the regional main lines to supply their own distribution systems.

Young said meetings will have to settle when work will start, how the trunk system will be developed and how customers will pay for it.

One way would be to have the capital cost of the regional trunk system financed through property taxes while the cost of the water and maintaining the system might be collected through a utility charge, he said.

Jim Campbell, regional board chairman, said Curtis' decision is "a strong and positive stand within which the three municipalities can solve their water problems."

The regional board's position has simply been a readiness to help in any way it can and if there are future delays in developing the integrated supply system, they can't be laid at the door of region or province, he said.

Campbell said he is in no doubt Curtis' decision was the right thing to do and it now remains for Central and North Saanich and Sidney to reach accord on implementation.

Visitors' Coins Sold

The Victoria Visitors' Information Centre has sold all its 50,000 tourist dollars.

"We are sold out," manager Don Nixon said today. "All merchants except a few stores have accepted as tender the tourist dollar."

He said the information centre still has a few silver coins selling at $16 and gold coins at $240, but these are expected to go before the end of September.

Nixon said the few stores refusing to accept the coins as tender are missing out on sales.

"The banks honor the dollars," he said. "There is no problem in getting your money back."

The cost of minting the coins and promoting the scheme is estimated at 45 cents a coin, but are sold by the centre for $1 each.

Saanich Townhouse Project Rejected

An Alberta development company's proposal to build 85 townhouses and duplexes on 9.5 acres in the north Quadra area of Lucas and Morris was unanimously rejected Monday by Saanich council.

The bid by Hallward Business Enterprises Ltd. was not on council's agenda and some aldermen asked why.

Although aldermen had not been informed the proposal was to be presented, the developers' representatives attended and displayed a model of the project.

Ald. Joe Bourque said he favored "that sort of a mix in a community" but felt the proposal was premature.

"How does this get here when we haven't made decisions on the density for that area?" he asked.

Ald. Sandy Noel said the area was much more suited to single-family development and reminded council the Ward and Associates' study commissioned by Saanich to guide council in community planning has recommended such a development for the southern part of the municipality.

WOOTTEN
. . . "unimaginative" proposal

Ald. David Paterson, in opposing the project, said a single-family subdivision bid for an adjacent property had been rejected at a recent public hearing because of the pressure it would have put on roads and services

"It's the first time I've seen it," Paterson added, "I'd want to review the copy of the land-use contract (before taking any action)."

"It's the first time I've Ald. Roy Wootten said, "It's the same old colors and the same old outside treatments . . . not the type of development we want in the area."

"Montrose Park" would have been an Assistant Home Ownership Plan development and Wootten was told this limited the scope which could be used to provide esthetics.

It was noted that although a recreation centre was placed in the centre of the project, according to the model, the developers did not intend to build it, except at the expense of the residents.

Bourque warned that, while the community plan for that area still has to be completed dealing with such proposals 'in isolation" is premature.

Heritage Deadline Sept. 9

City council must decide before Sept. 9 whether to contest an application in B.C. Supreme Court to quash its heritage building bylaw.

Owners of two Fairfield properties served notice Monday they are taking the application to court, citing 11 grounds why the bylaw should be quashed, or why they should be exempted from it to allow re-development as a 46-unit condominium.

The Heritage Protection Bylaw was applied two months ago to buildings at 1040 and 1042 Linden, owned by Krieger-Stricker Ltd., Centurian Holdings, Pacific Shore Estates and Desmond W. Dennis, and to Hampton Court Apartments, 159 Cook owned by E. J. Murphy Ltd.

On the following day, Sept. 10, the city will again be in Supreme Court to argue its case in refusing to grant a trade licence to the Gazebo Garden Cafe, Belleville Street, after the land was rezoned.

Partix Properties Ltd., lessee, takes the position that the intention of operating a cafe remained and the building still contained restaurant equipment, even though it was closed from the summer of 1972 and remained closed to this year while there was litigation with the landlord.

In other city business, council's development committee decided this morning to bill Victoria Flying Services Ltd., $441.22 a month for three months rent arrears and a portion of 1976 taxes.

Al. Bob Wright told the committee "I think we should take a strong stand with this particular company."

He urged action to clear up the outstanding debt which was partly due to misunderstanding at city hall.

City manager Jim Bramley said the company had been paying on the basis of quarterly billings. The city earlier admitted it had made a mistake in the rental charged to the company operating from a float in the Inner Harbor.

Land Commissioner K. R. Wilkins said the water lot was appraised at $4,878.75 which would provide for monthly rental of $441.22 including a 10 per cent administrative charge. But the amount of $1,215.24 in taxes is also owed.

Trial Set For Woman In Fatality

Jenny Grans, 29, of Burnaby, was committed Monday for higher court trial on two charges of criminal negligence arising from a two-car accident March 26 which took the life of Rick Jones, 19, of Victoria.

Jones, a quarterback with Simon Fraser University Clansmen, died in hospital April 2.

He formerly played with Oak Bay Farmer Construction in the Vancouver Island Juvenile Football League, and was a standout basketball player with Mount Douglas high school from which he graduated in 1974.

Provide Water Access, Council Tells Builder

The Victoria businessmen planning a 260-unit apartment project on the Gorge will be asked by Saanich to donate more waterway access.

Saanich aldermen decided unanimously Monday against passing the final reading of a land-use contract for the project until they have discussed waterfront access with the developers.

The project is planned on the San Sebastian Motel and Victoria Motor Court properties and will consist of six four-storey buildings with an average distance of 100 feet between them to allow passers-by view of the waterways.

The developers, who call themselves 76 Developments, have agreed to donate 40 feet along the waterfront between the park and the peninsula (Aran Point) on the property but only a one-foot strip along the rest of the waterfront.

Ald. Sandy Noel was the first to express concern that the one-foot strip was not enough and would block a promenade being built there, similar to other walks developed in the Gorge area.

Municipal planner Gil Laurenson said because of the nature of the bank a promenade was a "physical impossibility".

"It would have to be back at least 50 feet. You'd be 30 feet into the building. It would mean total replanning."

Ald. Maurice Johnson warned that in the future council would be asked to account for why no provision for access had been included in the land-use contract.

Noel suggested council try and get the developers to allow for a six-foot promenade in the future.

Mayor Ed Lum said no support could be expected from the city of Victoria on Saanich's hopes that the Capital Improvement District-supported Gorge beautification project would be completed in simlar fashion in the Victoria portion of the Gorge.

"In the Victoria part of the Gorge they plan meandering walkways in the upper areas,' Lum said.

Municipal engineer Cliff Warren said the one-foot strip was designed to provide an "anchor for the (sea wall".

Raw Milk Okay by Saanich

Saanich council won't go along with Tory leader Scott Wallace's campaign to ban the sale of raw milk.

Wootten said, "I think people should have freedom of choice."

Ald. Fred Severson quipped he could see nothing wrong with raw milk "when I see how healthy Ald. Casilio looks" but suggested people should be aware of potential hazards of raw milk as outlined by Scott Wallace (a medical doctor) and regional health officer Dr. A. S. Arneil.

Severson agreed with the rest of council, however, to take no action and Casilio said "Some doctors recommedn raw milk."

280 ACREAGE FOR SALE AND WANTED

SINCE 1887
Pemberton Holmes Ltd.
1000 Government St.

THESE ARE ALL QUALITY PIECES

A. The most awe inspiring view I have seen, ten miles from town. Seclusion yet neighbors not too far — all adjacent lots built on 2 acres of VIEW and arbutus. Driveway in, main water, hydro. Just beyond 871 WALFRED. Drive up, then climb the last bit and look East, South and West (North is treed). $40,500.

B. This VALUE, 427 ft. road front, 500 ft. disused railway front, a winter creek, driveway roughed and blasted in, about 3 acres ready for pasture, some $25,000 of good fir, the whole is 17.5 acres for $97,000 at the end of Pegasus Way. Magnificent views, your own country estate.

C. 100 ft. WATERFRONT, 1 plus acres of good soil, light bush covering. Keep your boat out in front. Level ground, main water. Dufour Road off Whiffen Spit Rd. $42,500.

D. ANOTHER GREAT VIEW PROPERTY, 10.1 acres a couple of hundred yards from WEIRS BEACH. Magnificent high building site on rock high above the road (driveway roughed in) or you can build lower down on good soil overlooking the beach. Excellent investment as some 400 ft. of proposed Pearson College Rd. splits the property. Main water $70,000.
